May Have Suffocated

Cosmonauts Killed in Space Tragedy

MOSCOW (AP) — Three Soviet cosmonauts died today as their Soyuz 11 spaceship was bringing them back from a record three-week flight aboard the Salute space laboratory. Foreign experts speculated they suffocated when their oxygen system failed.

Heinz Kaminsky, director of the Bochum Observatory in West Germany, said the oxygen system probably was knocked out during re-entry to the earth's atmosphere.

Josip Kotnik, Yugoslav president of the Astronautic Rocket Association of Croatia, speculated that after 24 days of weightless flight they may have been unable to activate the system for expelled carbon monoxide and introducing oxygen.

In announcing the tragedy in space, Tass news agency suggested no reason why the three were found dead after their spaceship landed. Tass said the cause of the deaths is being investigated.

An official announcement said the three spacemen—Lt. Col. Georgy Dobrovolsky, flight engineer Vladislav Volkov and test engineer Viktor Patsayev—completed their flight program Tuesday and communicated with ground control on the way down. Soyuz 11 made a smooth landing where it was supposed to, the announcement said, but the rescue crew that opened the hatch found the men dead.

The announcement published by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the cause of the deaths is being investigated. It gave no indication what they might be.

It was the second Soviet space flight to end in disaster. The first Soyuz spaceship crashed on April 24, 1967, after tangling in its parachute straps, and cosmonaut Vladimir Komarov was killed. No American spacemen have been killed in flight, but three astronauts—Lt. Col. Virgil I. Grissom, Lt. Col. Edward H. White II and Lt. Cmdr. Roger B. Chaffee—died Jan. 27, 1967, in a flash fire aboard Apollo 1 during a test on the launching pad.

All three cosmonauts were married. Dobrovolsky, the flight commander who was 43, and Patsayev, 37, each had two children, while Volkov, 35, had one son.

Soyuz 11 carried them into space at 7:55 a.m. on Sunday, June 6. It was the first space flight for Dobrovolsky and Patsayev, but Volkov had made 80 earth orbits in October 1969 aboard Soyuz 7.

Soyuz 11 linked up on June 7 with the 17½-ton space laboratory Salute, which had been orbiting the earth unmanned since April 19. The cosmonauts transferred to the bigger space lab and orbited the earth in it for nearly 23 days in what appeared to be a highly successful advance toward the permanent manned space station which is the goal of the present Soviet space program.

Tass said the men completed their flight program "in full" on Tuesday and were "directed to make a landing." The news agency gave this account of the fatal descent:

"The cosmonauts transferred the materials of scientific research and the logs to the transportation spaceship Soyuz 11 for return to earth.

"After completing the transition operation, the cosmonauts took their seats in the Soyuz 11 ship, checked the onboard systems and prepared the ship for unlinking from the Salute station.

"At 9:28 p.m. Moscow time— 2:28 p.m. EDT—the Soyuz 11 spaceship and the Salute orbital station separated and continued the flight separately. The crew of the Soyuz 11 spaceship reported to earth the unlinking operation passed without a hitch and all the systems were functioning normally.

"In order to carry out the descent to earth, on June 30, at 1:35 a.m., after orienting the Soyuz 11 spaceship, its braking engine was fired and functioned throughout the estimate time.

"At the end of the operation of the braking engine, communication with the crew ceased. According to the program, after aerodynamic braking in the atmosphere, the parachute system was put in action, and before landing the soft-landing engines were fired. The flight of the descending apparatus ended in a smooth landing in the preset area.

Die in Tragedy

The three Soviet Soyuz 11 cosmonauts (shown in the cabin of their spacecraft before their June 6 blastoff) died Wednesday, possibly from suffocation, on their return to earth. They are, front left, Georgy Dobrovolsky; rear, Viktor Patsayev; and Vladislav Volkov. Tass, the Soviet news agency, said the cosmonauts were found strapped in their seats by recovery crews "without any signs of life" when their craft soft-landed safely in Soviet central Asia (UPI)

Senator Reads Secret Papers

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on a 6 to 3 vote today permitted the New York Times and the Washington Post to publish stories based on the secret Pentagon study of the Vietnam war.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The night before President Lyndon B. Johnson cut back the bombing of North Vietnam in his successful 1968 bid to start peace talks the State Department secretly sent word to its Vietnam war allies that the move would most likely fail and full-scale resumption of the air war was possible any time.

A message to U.S. ambassadors in six capitals instructed them to tell the allied government chiefs:

"You should make clear that Hanoi is most likely to denounce the project and thus free our hand after a short period.

"Nevertheless we might wish to continue the limitation even after a formal denunciation, in order to reinforce its sincerity and put the monkey firmly on Hanoi's back for whatever follows."

The message is quoted at length in portions of the Pentagon papers on the Vietnam war made public Tuesday night and Wednesday by Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska. The senator in a suddenly convened one-man hearing of a Senate subcommittee read sections of the controversial study for three hours and 31 minutes.

The result was to make available to newsmen and the public a major share of the material, particularly the narrative account of policy-making and various documents or excerpts. Gravel's aides said some material the senator thought sensitive was screened out of the released material. Some passages had been cut out with a razor blade.

Public reports on the 47-volume, 7,000-page account were started two weeks ago by the New York Times and subsequently published by other newspapers as the secret study leaked widely. The government then took the issue of publication into the courts, obtaining restraining orders against three papers.

Gravel wound up his reading after 1 a.m. and went home to sleep shortly before dawn. His office reported receiving hundreds of telephone calls from around the country praising his action. A spokesman at the Justice Department had no comment on Gravel's action, referring all queries to the Defense Department.

Gravel said there was no justification for keeping the still officially top-secret papers from the American people.

"I have read these documents and I am convinced I am in no way jeopardizing this nation's security," he said.

One of the disclosures in the material released by Gravel was that Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara raised with President John F. Kennedy as early as Nov. 8, 1961, the possibility of attacking North Vietnam.

The suggestion was coupled with consideration then being given to a proposal by Gen. Maxwell Taylor, a Kennedy adviser, for some introduction of U.S. troops into the Mekong Delta area of Vietnam, then a source of Viet Cong strength and a scene of heavy flooding.

The suggestion was made on behalf of Roswell Gilpatric, McNamara's deputy, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Kennedy increased U.S. assistance to South Vietnam but kept it within the limits of military aid and advisers. Regular bombing of the North was started by President Lyndon B. Johnson in February 1965.

Question Sewage Funds

Replacement of a 22-year-old mercury seal on a trickling filter at Sedalia's south sewage treatment plant has been fully funded through priorities issued Wednesday for 40 water pollution control projects by the Missouri Water Pollution Board.

Still up in the air, however, according to Water Pollution Board officials, is $275,550 in state matching funds for construction of a new Southwest sewage lagoon.

Bob Hentges, director of the construction grant program for the Water Pollution Board, Jefferson City, told The Democrat-Capital Wednesday that $6.5 million in state emergency funds had been approved by the legislature and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes for such projects as replacing mercury seals and repairing and expanding existing facilities.

The total state and federal grant for replacing the mercury seal comes to $8,400, according to the Water Pollution Board.

However, city officials, including City Engineer Bob Cunningham and Mayor Jerry Jones, were under the impression the state matching funds for new projects, including the city's Southwest sewage lagoon proposal, had been released in the $6.5 million figure.

But Hentges said that the State Water Pollution Board has no funds available for the new fiscal year beginning Thursday and said that any matching state funds must be supplied by voter passage of a $150 million bond issue.

An estimated $275,550 in state funds would match more than $600,000 in federal funds to help construct the city's $1,196,975 Southwest sewer project.

Gov. Hearnes had sought to include funding for sewage lagoon projects under the $150 million bond issue, to be presented to Missouri voters by November, 1972.

In mid-May the Senate voted to restore $6.5 million in state appropriations to match federal and local monies for sewage disposal projects. Included in this restoration was the $275,550 figure for Sedalia. The amendment was later approved by the House shortly before the legislature adjourned earlier this month. A June 15 deadline for supplying state funds was said to be necessary in order to avoid a loss to the state of nearly $18 million in federal matching funds for projects waiting to be built.

Under present law, local communities put up 20 per cent of the money for sewage plant construction or improvement, so Sedalia would spend more than $300,000 for the Southwest sewage lagoon and more than $2,000 for replacement of the mercury seal at the south treatment plant.

City Engineer Bob Cunningham said Wednesday the city has already spent about $200,000 in preliminary work on the sewer project, consisting mostly of land easement purchases and tunnel and sewer construction along south Highway 65.

The project would include a main interceptor sewer and a sewage lagoon in

Major Rush To Get Extension of Draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress rushing to write a compromise two-year extension, the nation's draft law appears headed for expiration at midnight for the first time since 1948.

Senate-House conferees had saved a major stumbling block for last—Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield's amendment for a U.S. pullout from Indochina in nine months, passed 57 to 42 in the Senate and rejected 219 to 176 in the House.

Both Mansfield and House Armed Services Chairman F. Edward Hebert, D-La., who heads the conferees, said they doubt Congress could pass the extension before the midnight deadline.

Mansfield said he was not interested in any compromise of his pullout amendment.

"The Senate has spoken," he told newsmen.

The Selective Service System said it would halt the draft at midnight unless Congress extends it or President Nixon authorizes callup of students and other men whose deferments are expiring.

White House sources said Nixon probably would not authorize such a callup.

An Associated Press spot check found draft officials around the country were preparing to halt induction procedures until the draft is renewed.

Only the authority for actual callup of men expires at midnight. The Selective Service System which processes men through physicals and other preinduction activities remains intact.

However, the Florida Selective Service System directed its local boards to halt all induction procedures until further notice and several other states advised local boards to hold fast.

Major Changes Set In Postal Service

At the stroke of midnight today two things will pass out of existence — the 1971 fiscal year and the United States Post Office Department.

While the 1972 fiscal year may or may not bring much needed changes, the United States Postal Service, which will replace the antiquated Post Office Department, seems to have all the potential for progress.

Locally, the 103 postal employes, who handle about 130,000 pieces of mail daily, will help celebrate the change in the nation's postal service by offering refreshments to anyone who stops by the Sedalia Post Office.

Maurice Hogan, postmaster, also said that guided tours of the Sedalia facilities will be available for the public, and souvenir envelopes imprinted with the old and new insignias of the Postal Service will be given away.

Stamp collectors will be able to purchase first day covers of the new 8-cent stamp for the price of a regular stamp, Hogan said, and posters of various historic stamps are available upon special order.

Hogan, who has requested area businesses and residents to display the American flag in connection with the celebration, said, "We believe the commitments and efforts of Postmaster General Blount to provide better, faster and more dependable service under the new structure will be evident in the months and years ahead."

The local post office, which has a payroll of approximately $1,085,000 annually, operates 12 trucks and processes mail in an area going as far as Syracuse, Climax Springs, Gilliam, Knob Noster, Emma and Sedalia, and is associated with post offices in 31 area towns. It also maintains a classified branch at Whiteman AFB.

Man Fined $25 for 'Biting Dog'

A Sedalia man who made national headlines last Friday pleaded innocent but was fined $25 Wednesday for disorderly conduct by biting a dog.

Newton E. Foster, 51, 520 North Osage, was represented by attorney James Buckley, who said he planned to appeal the conviction.

The unusual municipal court drama began at 8:30 a.m. and lasted about 20 minutes. One of the "witnesses" in the case was "Shoe-Shoe Baby," the dog Foster allegedly bit.

Mrs. Lula Mae Scroggins, 308 West Pettis, Shoe-Shoe Baby's owner, brought the dog to court to show its wound, one-inch around on the flank, to the court.

Newton Foster

Testifying in his own behalf, Foster told Judge Lawrence Englund that he had not bitten the dog but merely told Mrs. Scroggins that as a joke.

Last week the story drew national attention when the Associated Press and United Press International wire services carried it. The incident also received mention from the ABC radio network.

FBI Chief Obtains Nixon Endorsement

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today declared that "the era of permissiveness with regard to enforcement of the law is at an end in the United States."

Speaking at FBI National Academy graduation exercises, Nixon also said that while FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover may be controversial "the great majority of the American people back Mr. Hoover and back law enforcement officials."

Having known Hoover for the past 24 years, Nixon said, "I can say from experience that he is a man who has never served a party. He has always served his country and he deserves credit for that."

Returning to the stiff law and order stance that he embraced as a presidential candidate, Nixon pledged administration support to law enforcement officials "in their attempt to reestablish respect for the law."

He said that, while it has been fashionable among some to attack the police and law enforcement, "The great majority of the American people do provide backing for the men who risk their lives for our lives."

The twice-yearly graduation exercises of the Academy brought together on the same stage the nation's top three law and order men: Nixon, Hoover and Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

Mitchell, in his remarks, decried what he termed "a tidal wave of legalisms" that is frustrating society's right to see prompt arrest, speedy trial and swift punishment of criminals.

Nebraska Weather Threatens

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thunderstorms accompanied by strong, gusty winds rolled over Nebraska Tuesday evening.

The winds, at one time clocked at 80 miles per hour, blew off the top 20 sections of a micro wave relay tower at Oshkosh, destroyed two trailers at the Riverside Mobile Home Park south of Kearney, and caved in a roof at an auction house near the trailer park.

Phil Burney, whose family occupied one of the trailer homes, said his place rolled over four times. He, his wife and four children were treated for minor injuries at a Kearney hospital and released.

An estimated 200 persons were attending an auction at the Paul Londer Auction Service Co. building when the roof caved in. No one was injured.

At the trailer park several other trailers were damaged by high winds and flying debris.

United Telephone Service, owner of the relay tower, said telephone service was to be restored today for Oshkosh and Lewellyn. Some sections of the tower fell off and part of the tower was bent.

Streets were flooded in Kearney where two inches of rain fell in a 30-minute period. Four inches was reported at the Minden Interchange of Interstate 80.

Andy's Air Service at the Kearney Airport registered the wind velocity at 80 miles per hour.

At Burwell, close to 2½ inches of rain was reported and Grand Island unofficially reported 4½ to 5 inches of rainfall.

When New York City draw bridges were opened and left unattended during a recent strike, three bridgetenders were suspended.

For Congress

Tax Cut Isn't Ruled Out

By EDWARD LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress still may consider a tax cut to stimulate the economy, says the principal architect of tax legislation, even though President Nixon has said he will not seek one.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said in an interview the White House policy statement Tuesday has not changed his mind: He still intends to study the mid-year economic data and decide whether to propose tax changes that would release more spendable funds to the private sector.

"I haven't ruled anything out and I haven't decided on anything," Mills said.

However, he is known to consider the quickest-acting tonic to the economy would be revival, in some form, of the investment tax credit repealed in 1969.

Any such business tax relief, it was understood, necessarily would be accompanied by some easing of individual taxes, likely by a speedup of future exemption and deduction liberalizations already written into existing law.

The investment credit allowed businesses to charge off directly against their taxes 7 per cent of their investment in equipment.

Mills and the tax specialists of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation believe a renewed investment credit would take effect much faster than the liberalized depreciation writeoff provisions the Treasury already has put into effect.

The credit would be available as soon as the investment is made, rather than over a period of years, they contend, and mere announcement of its renewal would trigger a stepup in business investment, one of the economic sectors now performing more sluggishly than had been hoped.

Under present law, the personal exemption a taxpayer may claim for himself and each of his dependents is $650 this year. It is scheduled to go up to $700 in 1972 and $750 in 1973.

Youth Fare Squabble On

By VERN HAUGLAND
AP Aviation Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Transportation says it will ask the Civil Aeronautics Board to put pressure on U.S. and foreign-owned airlines to either discontinue or extend to all passengers the new youth and student fare on major transatlantic routes.

Asst. Secretary of Transportation Charles D. Baker said a statement urging the CAB to use the speediest possible action against the new fares will be filed within a few days.

Baker, in a letter to CAB Chairman Secor D. Browne, said the $210 New York-to-London round-trip student-youth fare is $332 below the normal economy fare of the summer travel season.

"Unless real cost reductions can be shown for the student-youth fare, this large difference—or some part of it—will necessarily be made up by other travelers to whom the financial sacrifice may be a greater personal hardship than to travelers in the student-youth group," he said. Baker said the Transportation Department favors a lower fare on a no-reservation, space-available basis. Such a fare would be available to all travelers, he said.

The department's reaction followed by less than a month an announcement by Sabena Airlines that it was reducing its youth fare from New York to Brussels round-trip to $220.

Pan American promptly filed a matching rate. Numerous other airlines followed with new youth and student rates.

The CAB cannot order the airlines to discontinue the special fares. But it could—if it found the fares unjustly discriminatory—abolish international flight agreements with other countries, a CAB spokesman said.

Such a step would mean the end of all flights between the United States and other countries until new agreements could be reached. This step, the spokesman said, would be taken only with the agreement of the State Department and the President.

Baker said the United States fully recognizes the social benefits sought by special price treatment for such groups as servicemen and the clergy.

"However," he said, "we are opposed to discrimination beyond that absolutely necessary. We look with disfavor on policies which discriminate against any major segment of the public—the working vacationer, the aged, passengers over 30, the very young" and others.

Missouri Cities See Crime Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Statistics released by the Federal Bureau of Investigation indicate Kansas City and other major Missouri cities generally recorded fewer major crimes in the first three months of 1971 compared with the similar period in 1970.

Kansas City, Kan., however, registered about a 30 per cent increase in murders.

Offenses known to the police for the quarter (1970 figure first) January through March:

Independence, Mo.—Murder non-negligent manslaughter, 1, and 2; Forcible rape, 5 and 4; robbery, 18 and 9; aggravated assault, 45 and 21; burglary breaking or entering, 187 and 190; larceny $50 or more, 170 and 146; auto theft, 64 and 42.

Kansas City, Kan. — Murder, non-negligent manslaughter, 6 and 9; forcible rape 24 and 20; robbery, 134 and 136; aggravated assault 129 and 114; burglary breaking or entering, 765 and 868; larceny $50 or more, 184 and 173; auto theft, 448 and 391.

Kansas City, Mo.—murder, non-negligent manslaughter, 33 and 24; forcible rape, 83 and 59; robbery, 669 and 574; aggravated assault, 409 and 338; burglary breaking or entering, 2,894 and 2,586; larceny $50 or more, 1,601 and 1,413; auto theft, 1,218 and 1,223.

Widow Gives Plea Of Guilty in Court

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The widow of John Russell Pardue Jr., pleaded guilty in federal court Tuesday to charges resulting from the escape attempt which resulted in Pardue's death.

Nancy Pardue, 25, admitted that she smuggled a rifle to her husband April 8.

Pardue was shot by a guard as he tried to escape from a lockup at the federal court building in Bridgeport, Conn., where he was being tried for a 1970 bank robbery and bombings in Danbury, Conn. Pardue, 28, died in a Springfield, Mo., hospital three weeks later.

Mrs. Pardue, who had one child by Pardue, pleaded guilty to charges of using a firearm unlawfully during commission of a felony, aiding and abetting an assault on a federal officer and attempting to aid or instigate an escape attempt.

The maximum penalty is 40 years in prison. Judge Thomas F. Murphy deferred sentencing pending completion of the required investigation by the U.S. Probation Department.

Careless Deployment Criticized

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Pollution control devices can be negated by carelessness and negligence, an Ethyl Corporation executive said Tuesday.

"One misfiring spark plug can cancel out all the benefits of pollution control devices on the car," said Arthur H. Zeitz of Houston, Tex.

Zeitz said pre-1968 cars with unregulated exhaust and the careless motorist who doesn't keep his car tuned are the two main problems in automotive exhaust pollution.

He said the average motorist's refusal to replace tires until far past the danger point shows how motorists will react to the need for pollution control device maintenance or replacement.

Zeitz also challenged the damage which is sometimes attributed to lead.

He said government studies show exhausted lead is not a health problem and is not expected to be.

About 95 per cent of today's gasolines contain lead, he said, but he claimed removal of lead would reduce the particles of air pollution only by about one half of one per cent.

Zeitz, the manager of product application for Ethyl, made his comments at the convention of the National Association of Truck Stop Operators' convention.

Conclude Prisoner Report

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS and Walter Cronkite concluded their two-part report on American prisoners of war in North Vietnam with an hour that concentrated primarily on the discouraged, worried families of the captured men.

Many wives, including some whose husbands have been held for seven years, talked—rather bleakly—of the importance of taking one day at a time, of the problems of raising children without a father. Some seemed disillusioned about the lack of progress; one or two appeared angry that little had been accomplished. Women whose husbands have been listed as "missing" for several years seemed the most baffled.

Cronkite noted that in recent years President Nixon has "gone public" on the subject, talking about their plight often, while President Johnson preferred to use quiet diplomacy. Neither has proved effective. Since international criticism of Hanoi's treatment of prisoners, he said, the propaganda-sensitive North Vietnamese have permitted more exchanges of mail—and have taken a lot of film showing the treatment they claim they are giving the men.

Since the release of the war prisoners is tied into the question of American withdrawal, it was impossible to come to any conclusions or even make any predictions.

Announce Accord On Opium

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon personally announced today a plan by the Turkish government to eliminate by mid-1972 the production there of opium poppies—estimated to account for 60 per cent of the illegal heroin used in the United States.

Appearing before newsmen at the White House, Nixon said the action by Turkey is "by far the most significant breakthrough that has been achieved in stopping the source of supply of heroin."

The President called the move by Prime Minister Nihat Erim a very courageous and statesman-like action.

Flanking him as he spoke were Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Mielih Esenbel, Turkey's ambassador to the United States.

Esenbel told newsmen that halting poppy production—a legitimate agricultural enterprise in his country for many centuries—certainly will cause "internal problems" and "some economic dislocation."

Rogers said the United States will provide money and technical assistance to help Turkey replace poppy production with other cash crops.

The secretary estimated the annual value of Turkey's poppy crop at between $3 million and $5 million.

Until the ban on poppy-growing goes into effect, Rogers said, Turkey will attempt more stringent licensing and control of current output.

He also said the Turkish government plans to buy up as much of the current crop as possible at premium prices with the aim of keeping it out of illicit channels.

Rogers said six other nations harvest legal poppy crops and reported that the United States is attempting to persuade each of them to follow the stand taken by Turkey.

Draftee Figures Unknown

For the first time in the existence of the Pettis County Selective Service Board, there is no way to determine how many men may be drafted in July or August, according to Mrs. Verna Williams, secretary to the board.

Mrs. Williams said that she usually receives figures from the State Selective Service Headquarters in St. Louis about 30 days in advance of a particular month's quota, but not this time.

Final action regarding extension of the draft law is currently under consideration in Congress, Mrs. Williams said.

Fewer men are being drafted this year, compared to last year, according to figures released by Mrs. Williams.

In all of 1970, 72 men were drafted from Pettis County. In the first six months last year 57 men were drafted, but this total had dropped to 29 in the first six months in 1971.

Draft lottery numbers show the same downward trend. Through June of last year, men were drafted with lottery numbers up to 165. For the same period in 1971, the top lottery number used has been 108. The highest lottery number used in July and August last year was 170.

Sedalia Man's Trial Begins; Rape Charged

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WARSAW — Prosecuting attorney Adam Fisher, Sedalia, and defense lawyer James Herd, Kansas City, spent almost three hours Wednesday selecting an all-male jury to hear the rape case of Larry Curry, 20, 617 Wilkerson, Sedalia.

The trial, which is being held in Benton County Circuit Court on a change of venue from Pettis County, began about 9 a.m. and recessed about noon. Opening statements by both attorneys and the first of a total of 10 subpoenaed witnesses are expected to be heard in the afternoon session.

Curry was arrested in April of 1970 and charged with rape and two counts of robbery after he allegedly broke into the Robert Bohm residence, Route 3, Sedalia, forcibly raped Mrs. Donna Bohm, 25, and left with a shotgun and rifle he took from the home.

The rape charge, a capital offense, carries a possible sentence of from two years imprisonment to death upon conviction.

Curry has been held in the Benton County Jail since last year.

Parole Is Granted In Drug Conviction

Joseph "Skip" Sisemore, 21, Route 3, sentenced last August to a three-year term in the custody of the State Department of Corrections, Jefferson City, for the unlawful possession, sale and transportation of hallucinogenic drugs on Feb. 18, 1969, has been paroled for the remainder of his prison term, according to Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax.

Fairfax said a definite date for the end of Sisemore's parole would be sent to his office later in the week. Sisemore will be under the jurisdiction of a parole officer in Pettis County, where the offense took place.

Strasbourg Theft At $2,088,000

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Masked gunmen hiding inside Strasbourg's central post office today grabbed a shipment of money after a police guard had gone home and carried off an estimated 11.6 million francs worth—$2,088,000.

If that amount is confirmed, it will be the largest cash holdup in French history, though less than a third of the record $7 million haul in Britain's Great Train Robbery in 1963.

Mrs. Rosa Jeffries

Accidents

Two men from the Kansas City area were admitted to Bothwell Hospital about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday after a one-car accident on Route B, three miles south of Highway 52.

The driver of the 1968 Mustang sustained a broken neck. He was identified as William H. Novak, 17, Kansas City. A passenger in the car, Larry J. Brotzinski, 21, Sugar Creek, had facial lacerations, broken facial bones and abrasions. Both were listed in fair condition at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said that the accident occurred when the driver lost control of the car going around a curve. The car went off the right side of the road and overturned several times.

Steve D. Davis, 19, 1028 South Merriam, was admitted to Bothwell Hospital about 3:15 a.m. Wednesday after a one-car accident on the Old Waterworks Road, about half a mile north of the Sedalia Waterworks near Route U.

According to the Missouri State Highway Patrol, Davis suffered severe lacerations to his left forearm. Hospital officials listed his condition as good at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

The Highway Patrol said that Davis was listed as the only occupant of a 1965 Plymouth, which was southbound. The Highway Patrol said the accident occurred when the car went out of control and careened into a culvert.

Organizer of TWA Is Dead at Age 79

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard W. Robbins, prominent Kansas businessman and rancher, died in Chicago Tuesday. He was 79.

Robbins was the organizer and first president of Transcontinental and Western Air, which later became Trans World Airlines.

Robbins was president of Transcontinental & Western Air Lines from 1930 to 1935.

A native of Kingman County, Kan., he was active in Republican politics in that state and was associated with his brothers, Edward and Martin, in a big cattle-raising enterprise in Kiowa County.

In 1940, he was appointed chairman of the Kansas Industrial Development Commission by Gov. Payne Ratner. He was an original member of the commission which was created by the 1939 legislature.

Police Report

Around $415 in cash was taken from the Robert Barbour residence, 619 East 18th, overnight while Barbour was sleeping.

Barbour told the police that both doors to his residence were left unlocked. He told police he had worked late at his store and did not have the opportunity to go to the bank. He took the receipts from Tuesday's business home with him. Besides the cash, he took home $1,600 worth of checks. Barbour said he had no idea when the thief or thieves entered his home.

Leonard Corson, 2511 Anderson, reported to police at 10:59 p.m. Tuesday that two windows on a car, which was parked at his residence, were broken out earlier that night.

Mrs. Dorothy Fisher, 615 South Lafayette, reported to police at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday that 10 window panes had been damaged by vandals at the Cramer Construction Co., 111 West Second.

Mrs. Fisher, an employe of the firm, said the damage had been done with a pellet or BB gun.

Albert G. Portis, 1109 West 10th, reported to police at 7:36 a.m. Wednesday that 25 window panes, valued at $50, at his residence were damaged by vandals during the night.

Fires In The City

Sedalia firemen responded to two alarms Tuesday afternoon, however neither resulted in any damage.

The first call, listed as an honest mistake, was to 1408 North Osage at 12:29 p.m. A pile of burning brush prompted the call.

At 2:47 p.m. firemen used one booster line to extinguish a grass fire along the railroad tracks at Main and Park.

Anti-Pornography Petitions Mailed

At least 10 area churches or pastors are in the process of mailing petitions to three Sedalia stores — one book store and two drug stores — requesting the owners to withdraw allegedly pornographic material from sale.

The Rev. Jene A. Cook, pastor of Faith Baptist Church, told The Democrat-Capital Wednesday that the pastors promised to mail the petitions Wednesday. He added that in cooperation with other petitioners, he plans to follow up the letters with personal visits Friday and Saturday "to see if the proprietors are still selling questionable literature."

Increase In Crime Is Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious crime continued to rise nationally in the first three months of 1971, up 6 per cent from the same period last year, but Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell said crime actually declined in 61 large cities.

Although property crimes increased less rapidly in the first quarter of 1971 than in the first quarter of 1970, violent crimes increased a bit faster.

But Mitchell pointed out today, in releasing FBI crime statistics, that the over-all 6 per cent increase was considerably below the 13 per cent hike between 1969 and 1970. It was the lowest rate of increase in five years, he added.

The 61 cities that experienced a drop in the total number of crimes reported between 1970 and 1971 were among 154 U.S. cities with a population of 100,000 or more. Mitchell said statistics for the first quarter of 1970 showed 20 cities with fewer reported crimes than in the comparable period of 1969.

Property crimes — burglary, auto theft and larceny of $50 or more—increased by 5 per cent between the first quarter of 1970 and 1971, compared with a 13 per cent increase between 1969 and 1970.

Violent crimes—murder, forcible rape, robbery and aggravated assault—increased by 13 per cent between 1970 and 1971, compared with a 12 per cent hike between 1969 and 1970.

The rate of increase in all crimes was highest—12 per cent from 1970 to 1971—in the six U.S. cities with a million or more population. Inexplicably, the 20 cities with between one million and 500,000 population recorded an average decrease of 4 per cent in reported crime.

Meeting In Korea For Agnew

SEOUL (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew conferred for 50 minutes today with South Korean President Chung Hee Park and said the tone of U.S.-Korean relations "is a lot more relaxed" than during his negotiations here last August.

Agnew told reporters that discussions with Park, which followed a ceremony in which he presented his credentials for Park's inaugural Thursday and a personal message from President Nixon, were "of a very general nature."

Last August, Agnew spent more than six hours in conferences with Park as the South Koreans presented a lengthy shopping list of military equipment they wanted in return for the withdrawal of 20,000 U.S. troops from this country.

Agnew declined to say if any further cuts in the 43,000-man U.S. force are planned, but he reiterated that his meetings with Korean leaders this time are not designed for hard negotiating. He said he expects to meet later in the week with Premier Kim Chong-pil.

Asked about issues between the two countries, Agnew said these are "more in the nature of administrative details" to be worked out by lower level officials.

Snake In the House Too Much For Man

A snake in the grass is bad enough, but Adolphus Butler, 521 North Lamine, just couldn't tolerate the 3½-foot black snake that invaded his living room Tuesday night.

So, he called police. When the officer arrived, he found the snake above a window on the south wall of the room.

After some preparation, Butler gave the officer a broom and the chase-and-snake-swatting operation began. The intensity of the anti-snake drive was so intense, however, that a hole was knocked out of the wall and the besieged serpent quickly crawled away.

Billboard Control Stressed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Robert L. Hyder, chief counsel for the Missouri Highway Department, said today he thinks a tougher billboard control law is sufficient reason for calling a special session of the state legislature.

Billboard control measures were introduced in both the House and the Senate during last spring's regular session but neither got anywhere.

John Volpe, secretary of transportation, has written Gov. Warren E. Hearnes that failure to pass a billboard control law meeting federal stands will result in a loss of 10 per cent in federal highway funds for the next five years— possibly as much as $60 million.

Hyder said he is preparing a letter for Hearnes to send Volpe informing him the Missouri legislature now under an annual sessions plan, is actually in recess until next January.

He said he asked Volpe in April if one of the pending bills met federal standards. No answer was received from Washington until after the legislative session had ended, Hyder said.

Hyder blamed Ben Ivey, National Outdoor Advertising Co., of Dallas, for blocking the pending bills. He said Ivey told legislators that the Department of Transportation would not cut off federal funds even if no bill was passed.

Hearnes expressed little interest in calling an immediate special session to meet the federal mandate. He said he thought Volpe should let the 1972 session handle the situation without penalty to Missouri.

Expecting Probe Of Election

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is expected to check into the United Mine Workers' 1969 election for possible criminal prosecution.

The Senate Labor subcommittee Tuesday said its investigative records, to be turned over to Atty. Gen. J. N. Mitchell, "developed substantial evidence relating to the alleged misuse of UMW funds by, or in behalf, of UMW officials" in the 1969 election.

Chairman Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., said a letter to Mitchell states Senate investigations disclose "evidence which suggests that numerous individuals have engaged in making false statements, committing perjury, evading income taxes and-or obstructing justice."

The subcommittee plans to conduct final public hearings soon on the election, which saw UMW President W.A. "Tony" Boyle win re-election by defeating Joseph A. Yablonski.

Yablonski was murdered shortly afterwards.

The government has filed suit to set aside the election.

School Bond Issue Passed In Cabool

CABOOL, Mo. (AP) — Voters approved a $320,000 school bond issue Tuesday.

The bond will provide for construction of a new high school with the assist of a $50,000 grant from the Reorganized Gravel Point Building Fund.

A two-thirds majority was necessary for approval of the bond and it carried, 313 to 111.

11 Years Of History End Today

WHITEMAN AFB — When the 17th Strategic Aerospace Division (SAD) is officially deactivated at midnight Wednesday, an 11-year chapter of history closes here. But many of the 17th's people will remain here with assignments in the 351st Strategic Missile Wing.

The 17th SAD began as Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron, 17th Bombardment Wing. Activated at Savannah Air Base, Ga., in 1940, its major elements were two night bombardment groups. Between its initial activation and being disbanded in 1948, the 17th performed as a training unit.

The 17th SAD grew into a mixed force of bombers and missiles and is being deactivated as a part of a division realignment within SAC's Numbered Air Forces. It will be replaced by a newly-formed, all-Minuteman Fourth Strategic Missile Division (SMD), Thursday.

The only officers from the 17th SAD scheduled to join the new 4th SMD headquartered at Francis E. Warren AFB, Wyo., will be Brig. Gen. Robert R. Scott, commander, and Lt. Col. Robert E. Bohne, executive officer.

Although General Scott says his new job will differ little in responsibility from his 17th SAD command, he says he'll be "twice as busy" when all six Minuteman wings, including Whiteman's 351st, come under his supervision.

Of 16 former division personnel here, nine military and two civilian employes are being reassigned to wing jobs at Whiteman.

Underground Installation Is Required

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JEFFERSON CITY — Electric distribution systems installed in new subdivisions must be placed underground, the Missouri Public Service Commission ordered Wednesday. The commission established the requirement in a general order which becomes effective July 14.

The order followed a study begun by the commission last year to set statewide criteria for burial of electric lines and the allocation of the cost of construction. The new rule will apply to subdivisions of two or more lots or multiple-occupancy buildings containing two or more residences. The lines affected would be those from the dwelling to the transformer and from the transformer to the subdivision terminal.

All utilities in Missouri, investor-owned and cooperatives, must comply with the Order. However, the requirements for charges from the builder and construction advances will not apply to cooperatives.

Investor-owned utilities may make a single charge of $50 for each residence and $10 for each dwelling unit in multiple-occupancy buildings to defray the cost of installation. The amount will be reduced by 20 per cent for each year after the date of the order, and no charge will be made after five years. The utility will not be allowed to waive the charge.

Q — I would like to know how the Sunset Optimist Club justifies the selling of such dangerous items as fireworks while still priding themselves as "a friend of the boy." I wonder how they would feel if one of their "friends" was seriously injured by their fireworks? — J.G.

A — Alan Diehl, president of the Sunset Optimist Club, said that the club sponsors various fund raising projects throughout the year so that it can support programs for youths in the Sedalia area. Among the programs supported by the club according to Diehl are Junior League Football, the Boy's Club and a Ban Johnson baseball team. In addition, he said that the club has worked together with various mental health groups in this area. "Kids are going to buy (fireworks) from someone," he said, adding that the money taken from such sales might as well be spent on public programs as on private gain. Diehl also stated that the "primary responsibility for children's safety rests with the parents" and not with service clubs. The other two Optimist Clubs in Sedalia, the Sunrise and Noonday Clubs, are not selling fireworks this year, Hot Line was told.

Q — Back in 1959, the chairman of the Sedalia Park Board, John Vandekamp, said Liberty Park would get a new entrance to replace the stone entrance that was damaged in an automobile accident. What happened to that new gate in the 12 years since then? — F.M.N.

A — Vandekamp, when contacted by Hot Line and asked about the situation, said "There are two reasons the current gate was not replaced: one is money and the second is possible road construction on West Third, which runs parallel to the main gate to the park." Vandekamp said that when the plan was introduced the park board was operating under a budget set by the City Council. "At that time, we had an extremely tight budget and had to make do with what we had," he said. Since July, 1966, the park board receives funds from a two-mill tax levy. Vandekamp said that there had been various proposals before City Council to straighten out West Third Street, all of which would have created a construction problem in the park gate area. There are no current plans for the street and the gate proposal seems to have been shelved as well.

Q — I placed four artificial bouquets on gravesites at the LaMonte cemetery on Decoration Day. When I went back a week later all the artificial flowers were in the dump. Why was this done? — Mrs. W.G.G.

A — Paul Moore, secretary-treasurer of the LaMonte Cemetery Association told Hot Line that the sexton removed most of the flowers shortly after Decoration Day in preparation for mowing operations. Moore said this is usually done just twice a year. He also noted that a number of artificial flowers were stolen from the cemetery that week and yours may have been among those taken, he said.

Methods To Improve Economy

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You can show the effect of the economic slowdown in countless ways, but one of the statistical proofs that you probably haven't heard about is this:

Last year, 53 of the nation's leading corporations and seven government agencies participated in the National Urban League's summer fellowship program that provided summer employment for 192 educators from black colleges.

In 1971, the number of participating government agencies remains the same but the list of corporations is down to 41 and, to date, only 125 educators have been placed.

The cutback comes despite wide and sometimes enthusiastic approval of the program, which was begun in 1965 in an effort to bridge the gap between the black community and the business establishment.

Under the program, both educators and corporations make known their desires to the NUL, which then matches them. The educators receive the same salary as in his primary job, plus all travel and living expenses.

The work assignment is directly related to the educator's academic discipline so that he not only can contribute but benefit from on-the-job experience, which he then may relate to his students.

At Eastman Kodak, Dr. Joe Johnson of Atlanta University worked in the chemistry division of the research laboratory.

"He developed an Assay for the first enzyme in the pentaerythritol degradative pathway in bacteria," a company spokesman wrote. "As a result he was able to trap and isolate a new pentaerythritol metabolite."

The letter to the NUL continues: "Out of this biological method he made and characterized seven new compounds analogous to the pentaerythritol metabolite. This summer's work should yield several publications and possibly a patent."

Some sponsors are quite openly interested in obtaining information that perhaps only a black can provide. At Omaha National Bank, Dr. Henry Ponder, vice president of Alabama A & M, is studying the black citizen's environment.

People in the News

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frank Sinatra's agent, deluged with whispers in the night and wee-hour calls that Sinatra is rumored ill, says the now-retired crooner may be forced to hold a news conference proclaiming his good health.

"It's getting ridiculous," said agent Jim Mahoney after being roused late Monday to deny rumors heard by a newspaper that the 55-year-old entertainer was in a Buffalo, N.Y., hospital.

Mahoney said rumors on Sinatra's health went wild after he announced his retirement from public life some two months ago.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Singer Vic Damone and Actress Judith Rawlings have been divorced and the crooner reveals in the property settlement that he is nearly broke.

Damone, 43, formerly married to actress Pier Angeli, agreed to the decree Monday in Superior Court to give his wife, 35, monthly support of $2,100 for herself and their three children. They married in 1963. He said in an affidavit he is contemplating bankruptcy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lillian Roth will play her first nonmusical role in Neil Simon's latest comedy, "The Prisoner of Second Avenue," to open Nov. 11 on Broadway.

Miss Roth, who last appeared on Broadway in the musical "70, Girls, 70" will play the sister of Peter Falk who is costarred with Lee Grant in the play about the problems of a married couple living in an expensive, modern, high-rise apartment.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman and his wife observed their 52nd wedding anniversary Monday in a hospital where she is undergoing a general physical checkup.

A secretary said the Trumans received "quite a number of anniversary cards and letters."

The former president has been a daily visitor since his wife was admitted last Monday.

A hospital spokesman said Mrs. Truman's condition was good but did not indicate when she would return to her home in nearby Independence, Mo.

At Liberty Park

Youngsters Learning Water Skills

Interested Spectators

The mothers, sisters and brothers of swimming students form an eager audience for swimming lessons at Liberty Pool. Many mothers such as the two shown here, bring their chairs and enjoy watching the progress of their swimmers. Shown are (foreground) Mrs. Dean Kitchens, 2509 South Ingram and Mrs. Larry Brown, 504 East 15th.

Demonstrates Diving

Bob Candy assists one of the more advanced beginners as she learns to dive. After the beginners pass various swimming skills tests, they learn beginning diving. Also pictured with the beginners is instructor Mark Hewett. Students enrolled in the Red Cross lessons range from beginners to senior lifesaving students.

Close Supervision

Miss Martha Hogan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hogan, 602 West Seventh, keeps a close watch on her charges as they practice floating and kicking exercises. The swimmers are divided into small groups according to ability and senior lifesaving instructors oversee the activities of each group.

Rally 'Round

Beginners receive technique suggestions from Miss Beverly Lane. With the beginning students divided into small groups, instructors can give each student more complete instruction. From the wet smiling faces of the youngsters, it is obvious they enjoy the lessons.

Probe Plane Crash

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa (AP) — Federal narcotics investigators were pressing their investigation today into items found at the scene of a plane crash near Mount Pleasant which claimed two lives early Tuesday.

Killed in the crash were Leo Willis Roethe Jr., 20, Fort Atkinson, Wis., and Laure A. Meyer, 19, of Edmunds, Wash. Roethe was believed to have been the pilot of the Cessna 210. He was the son of Lee Roethe, president of Weatherby-Nasco, a gun manufacturing firm.

Two other persons, in the plane, Todd Michael Johnson and Mary B. Keelen, both of the Milwaukee area, were under treatment today at a Mount Pleasant Hospital.

Narcotics agents were called to the crash site five miles northwest of here after a plastic bag containing six pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana was found in a suitcase.

Iowa Highway Patrol Lt. Jerry Barnes said $3,500 in cash, a pistol and camera equipment were also found in the wreckage.

The aircraft lost its left wing, flipped onto its side and slid into a gully when it came down in a grove of trees. Officials said the plane had apparently taken off from El Paso, Tex.

Radio monitors had picked up a "Mayday" signal from the pilot about midnight Tuesday. The pilot said his engine cut out at 2,000 feet and the plane was going down.

Three planes participated in a search which finally located the downed craft about 10-hours after it crashed.

Boy Scouts Perish In Car Collision

CANTON, Kan. (AP) — Two boys working on a boy scout merit badge were killed near Canton late Tuesday when they were struck by a car.

Michael R. Vogts, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Vogts, and Michael L. Rathbone, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Rathbone, were walking west on the north side of U.S Highway 56 when a car driven by Ronald Hurtig, 39, Salina, struck them.

Farmers on the highway's east side said they heard brakes and saw one boy's body flying through the air.

Hurtig was not injured.

It was not immediately clear what project the two boys were working on.

The Hikari is the name of a superexpress train that travels more than 100 miles an hour in Japan.

At Nixon's Request

Rush Service Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — At President Nixon's belated urging, Congress is rushing through a $2.25-billion public-service jobs bill while a bipartisan effort forms to revive part of a more expensive economy-stimulating measure he vetoed.

The Senate passed the emergency employment act, 75 to 11, Tuesday and House leaders said they will try to send it to the White House before the 4th of July recess begins Thursday.

The Senate vote came just hours after Nixon's veto of a $5.6-billion public works bill he called too slow to fight soaring unemployment. But the President reversed an earlier stand and urged prompt approval of the compromise measure to create temporary jobs which he said could be filled quickly.

Meanwhile, Democrats announced plans to try to override the veto after the recess, although they conceded privately there is little chance. The Senate on June 8 passed the final version 45 to 33, or seven votes short of a two-thirds majority necessary to override.

The political overtones are clear in the fight over the two measures involving the jobs and the economy which Democrats expect to make a campaign issue in the 1972 presidential elections.

Senate Democratic presidential hopefuls joined in attacking the President for his public-works-bill veto. They said the key program criticized by Nixon could have supplied 420,000 jobs.

Nixon said, however, a similar law in 1962 indicated an 18-month time lag before it would become fully effective. By that time, he said, "further stimulation would be unnecessary and inflationary."

Sponsors of the public-service-jobs bill estimated it would create 150,000 to 200,000 jobs in state and local governments the first year if fully funded.

It would take effect when the national jobless rate is 4½ per cent or more; it now is 6.2 per cent.

Even if the rate fell below 4½ per cent, however, $250 million would be provided annually for areas with more than 6 per cent unemployment.

The jobs would be in areas such as education, health, recreation, conservation, law enforcement, fire protection and transportation.

The federal government would pay 90 per cent of the cost, and state or local governments 10 per cent. Veterans would get special consideration for the jobs, which would pay $1.60 an hour or the prevailing wage, whichever is higher.

Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., expressing surprise at the administration's turnabout, said he still opposes the bill on grounds it would make only a small dent in unemployment and might create a corps of permanently subsidized jobs which never could be ended.

Nixon said in his veto message the public-service-jobs bill had been revised more in line with his views. Last year he vetoed a similar measure.

Republicans are working openly to revive part of the vetoed public-works bill, and some Democrats are doing so privately.

Their goal is a compromise providing a $1.5-billion extension of the Appalachian regional development program and a $2-billion extension of the Public Works and Economic Development Act, but dropping a $2-billion accelerated public-works proposal Nixon specifically criticized.

Sens. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the GOP leader, and John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., chief sponsor of the measure, said they will work to sustain the veto but also to produce a second bill.

Democrats from the 13-state Appalachian region are expected to take the same view if the veto is not overridden.

For 18-Year-Old Vote

Rushing For Ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — Record quick approval of the 18-year-old-vote amendment is so close now the states have begun jockeying to see which will have the distinction of making it official.

Illinois completed ratification Tuesday, bringing the total to 35 states. Legislatures in five more states are poised to act next, which would be more than enough to put it over.

Ratification by 38 states is needed to give citizens 18 years and older the vote in all elections. If passed, the measure would be the 26th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Both houses of the Alabama legislature have ratified the amendment, but bickering over which chamber concurs in the other's version gave a new chance to its opponents. Ultimate passage still is expected.

The North Carolina House has passed a ratification resolution, but the Senate has been putting it off day-by-day.

The Ohio Senate passed it 30 to 2 Tuesday, and sources in the House said chances appeared good for final action this week.

The Oklahoma Legislature convenes Thursday in special session and quick ratification there is expected. Wyoming lawmakers convene Monday for the same purpose.

A record for speedy ratification seems assured. The Congress completed action on the amendment March 23 and five states stamped their approval on it after the first day.

The 12th Amendment, reforming the procedure for electing the president and vice president, how holds the record of eight months in 1803-1804 to win ratification from 13 of the 17 states then in the union.

In addition to Illinois, the 18-year-vote amendment has been ratified by Minnesota, Delaware, Washington, Connecticut, Tennessee, Massachusetts, Hawaii, Montana, Arkansas, Iowa, Idaho, Indiana, Nebraska, Kansas, Michigan, Maryland, Maine, Vermont, Alaska, California, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Texas, South Carolina, West Virginia, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Arizona, Louisiana, Rhode Island, New York, Oregon, Missouri and Wisconsin.

By a Supreme Court interpretation last December of the 1970 Voting Rights Act, youths aged 18 through 20 were given the vote in all federal elections, but not in state and local elections except in the handful of states with voting ages below 21.

Space Disaster Pinpoints High Risk of Exploration

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The tragic deaths today of Russia's three Soyuz 11 cosmonauts underscores once again that manned space flight is risky, that men die in its pursuit just as they did in the early days of aviation.

They die despite the most strenuous safety measures, the double and triple redundancy built in to try to insure the integrity of the hardware. But space is still a new frontier with many unknowns.

The cause of the cosmonauts' deaths is not now publicly known. The Soviet news agency Tass said only that Georgy Dobrovolsky, Vladislav Volkov and Viktor Patsayev were found dead in their capsule after landing in the Soviet Union following their record 24-day flight, most of it spent in the Salute space laboratory.

There could have been a failure in the life support system. Or maybe the sudden return to Earth's gravity after a long period of weightlessness affected the spacemen in an adverse way.

There will be a long investigation—as there were after earlier space tragedies in both the American and Soviet programs.

The fault probably will be found and corrected, and cosmonauts once again will fly into space.

Russia has declared its intention to develop a permanent orbiting space station, and the Salute is a forerunner.

The Soviet determination is evidenced in the over-all Salute mission. The laboratory was launched unmanned April 19 and four days later Soyuz 10 with three cosmonauts was launched to link up with it. They did on April 24, but disengaged after 5½ hours and returned to earth.

Experts apparently analyzed the problem on the ground and on June 6 Soyuz 11 soared aloft to complete the mission. Today's tragedy probably will slow, but not halt the program.

'Cachaca' Brazilian Joy

LIMEIRA, Brazil (AP) — Just as Scotland has its scotch and Russia has its vodka, Brazil, too, has a national drink. It's a powerful brew known in local slang as "cachaca" or "pinga" and made in thousands of distilleries throughout the country, with techniques handed down from generation to generation.

Extracted from sugar cane, cachaca usually is colorless. It has a powerful odor Brazilians jokingly call "mountain lion's breath." The alcoholic content ranges from 19 to more than 50 per cent.

Working-class Brazilians tend to gulp down their pinga straight, whereas foreigners usually are obliged to mix it with fruit juice and sugar to make a savory drink known as a "batida."

Renato Ragazzo and his family have been making cachaca for nearly half a century at the Alambique Beira de Estrada—that's Portuguese for "Roadside Still"—near the city of Limeira in the southeastern part of the country.

"Making cachaca is a kind of thing you're practically born into," Ragazzo, 58, told a visitor.

The still produces about 1,000 quarts of pinga a day. The family keeps what it wants and sells the rest. There are no laws in Brazil restricting the production of cachaca. Manufacturers must pay a 46 per cent government tax on what is sold to the public, however.

Cachaca distilleries in Brazil range in size from one-man operations where burros are used to grind the cane, to medium-size installations such as Ragazzo's, to modern automated factories that distribute the drink nationwide.

One large Sao Paulo company which makes a popular brand cachaca plans to export the drink to the United States and possibly Europe and Japan. Dehydrated fruit flavors will be included for making mix-it-yourself batidas.

To overcome possible hitches in placing its product in non-Brazilian markets, the firm is developing a new strain of sugar cane which will yield pinga that doesn't smell as strong as the local variety.

Some cachaca lovers prefer to custom-age the drink. Patrons of the Roadside Still often bring their own jugs, fill them with pinga and then go home and bury them in their cellars or back yards.

"The cachaca must rest," one customer said.

Duke's Son Seeks Image

NEW YORK (AP) — Moustached, casually dressed in an open-neck shirt and navy blazer, Patrick Wayne looks more as if he should be riding a horse across some vast western landscape rather than ordering sauteed trout in a New York restaurant, where the quarters are a bit cramped for his 6-foot-1 frame.

And, true to form—about to embark on a tour to promote his latest movie—where is he most looking forward to going? Texas—of course.

But what would you expect from John Wayne's son, who at this point in his career, though he speaks very warmly of his father, would like to be known as something other than the son of big Duke.

"It's tremendously difficult to create my own identity when my father is a living legend," he says. "But there's no way I can be successful unless I have my own image as Patrick Wayne. The other stuff about acting is pretty objective—developing a technique, getting the role straight, but the identity part is all important."

Wayne's identity problem could be complicated by the fact that his latest role is, in fact, playing his father's son in the film, "Big Jake." But he has plenty to talk about besides growing up in his father's limelight, and he admits there are areas where he and his father disagree. But he doesn't talk about them.

"When I first wanted to be an actor, my father made it a point not to influence me. Very wisely, he wanted to leave it to his children to decide what they would do with their lives," Wayne says.

And Wayne adds that he even went to college with the intention of divorcing himself from motion pictures. For a while, it looked as though he had succeeded because he developed a strong interest in biology. "I thought that meant I should be a doctor," Wayne says. "So I decided to go to medical school. But when I found out what being a doctor was all about, I decided that wasn't what I wanted."

"The time I had spent around the business before wasn't work," he says. "It was just being with my father, being out of school, on location, so the industry had a lot of warm spots for me. But I didn't want to forget the fact that it was a business—not just good memories."

But he admits to a problem most actors are facing—getting work. "Some of the best actors in Hollywood aren't working now," he notes. "An actor can be an artist, but if he doesn't appeal to people, he's out of work and there's nothing he can do about that."

"If an actor is at all serious about the business, he's competing against himself," he continues. "You're your own worst judge—even your own worst critic. And you can judge your own performances, but that's part of happiness too—when you think you're doing a good job."

Wayne is the husband of the former Margaret Hunt and the father of two young children.

BUSINESS NEWS

Russell Carr, manager of the Sedalia office of the Missouri Division of Employment Security, announced that vacancies now exist in union affiliated carpentry and masonry training programs at Montana and Utah Job Corps Centers. Transportation will be furnished.

Trainees are paid a living allowance, furnished room and board, clothing and medical services, and a job in union apprenticeship after graduation. Interested young men from 16 to 22 years of age may apply at the Employment Security Office, 215 East Fifth Street, July 7, when Job Corps representatives will be present to interview applicants.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Baker and family, 260 Greensboro Road, have won a two-day trip to Six Flags Over Mid-America with the compliments of Kitty Clover Potato Chip Co. this summer. The prize, which includes meals, lodging, gate admission and cash for the two-day visit, was the top award of a recent Kitty Clover contest.

Other area families who will receive the same prize are Kenny Leyba, Whiteman AFB, and Patrice Elaine Moore, California.

J Bartley, area distributor for Kitty Clover, named the winners Tuesday.

Boston Attorney Fined For Absence

BOSTON (AP) — Leon Leventhal, a Boston attorney, was fined the cost of one day in court, $2,500, for failing to appear to represent his client in a breaking and entering and larceny case.

Middlesex Superior Court Judge Allan M. Hale asked why Leventhal was not present Monday and was told he was on Nantucket Island. The judge asked for the approximate cost incurred by the court and was told $2,500.

A court official said the cost figure includes partial salaries for the judge, other court personnel and witnesses.

Banking Laws 'Labyrinthine'

By PETER WEAVER

Q — Several years ago I opened a certificate of deposit account with a downtown bank. I decided to close the account as soon as I received my next dividend.

One of the officials told me the amount I thought I was going to get did not agree with the bank's ledger. I had to wait at the bank from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. to finally get the amount shown on my passbook. Is this ethical? — S. L., Washington, D. C.

A — I don't know. The banking laws are labyrinthine. In the past when I told readers to try sending complaints into the various banking regulatory agencies — nothing happened. Apparently these agencies have no effective system of handling consumer complaints.

Help may be on the way. The National Commission on Consumer Finance is investigating consumer protection procedures (or lack of them) among regulatory agencies for banks and other lending institutions. Consumer comments about problems with money lenders are invited for the record. Send them to: National Commission on Consumer Finance; 1016 16th St. N.W.; Washington, D. C. 20036.

Q — Thanks for your help. After six months of writing futile letters to the Postal Inspector and Better Business Bureau, I received a full refund for a $12.95 magazine rack I ordered through the mail but did not receive. — Mrs. W.A.T., Dover, N.J.

A — Thank the Direct Mail Advertising Assn.; 921 National Press Bldg.; Wash., D. C. 20004. I passed your complaint on to them and they pushed the right button somewhere along the mail-order line.

Q — I purchased a Dynatone Facial Exerciser and, after using it, found that one side of my face began to feel funny. I discontinued its use, mailed it to the manufacturer and asked for a refund. In six months, I've received no answer. I'm out $70. What can I do? — Mrs. J.S.M., Los Angeles, Calif.

A — The Dynatone company was hit with a seizure action by the Food and Drug Administration and the latest information has it that the company is filing for bankruptcy. Not much chance of getting any money back.

Both the Federal Trade Commission and the FDA have found these electronic muscle stimulator devices ineffective for their intended purpose of removing wrinkles and firming up sagging muscles. Other electronic impulse gadgets advertised to tone up the body have been found to be potentially dangerous.

Q — How safe are these so-called "harmless" fireworks for children? — Mrs. C.J., Riverdale, N.Y.

A — The U.S. Public Health Service estimates that at least 15,000 persons are injured every year by fireworks. Most of them are small boys. The National Fire Protection Assn., says the so-called "safe and sane" sparklers and Roman candles have severely injured many a child.

Sparklers, for example, burn at 1,650 degrees Fahrenheit and can sear a small hand to the bone. Supervise fireworks closely, or stay away from them.

Take note — The Better Business Bureau of Winston-Salem, N.C., canceled the membership of Food Fair, a supermarket chain, because of repeated use of "underselling claims in advertising." Underselling claims are those which say "lowest prices in town." According to BBB officials, they are deceptive because there's no way to make effective price comparisons.

Problems Predicted

LYONS, Kan. (AP) — Dr. William Hambleton, director of the Kansas Geological Survey, said Tuesday night there are problems in connection with the proposed atomic waste depository near Lyons but it is hoped they can be worked out.

Dr. Hambleton was one of three speakers at a meeting of about 60 Lyons area residents who turned out for a question and answer session.

The other scientists were Dr. John L. Halecafka, hydraulist, and Dr. Ernest Agino, assistant director, both of the Kansas Geological Survey.

"The Atomic Energy Commission doesn't have the answers," Dr. Halecafka said. "I don't have the answers, and there are people in the scientific community who are a little embarrassed for Oak Ridge."

Dr. Hambleton said the AEC's early modeling for experiments on the depository were "simplistic." Dr. Agino asserted that more studies into the effects of long range radiation are needed.

Reports Socks Repel Leg Cramps

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Some months ago, one of the readers commented on wearing shoes to bed to prevent cramps. Since then, several readers have described their experiences in using warm socks or shoes to prevent leg cramps. Here are a couple of examples:

Dear Dr. Lamb — I found your comments on cold feet very interesting. I also wear socks to bed, besides wearing warm socks during the day. I have noticed that the cramps do occur following excessive chilling. I can feel a cramp tightening, and forcing the heel downward and pulling the toe up will sometimes prevent one.

As to whether or not shoes prevent cramping, I have had many cramps with shoes on. I think the socks and general warmth are most important.

Dear Dr. Lamb — You mentioned that you would like to hear from people putting on socks at night to inhibit foot cramps. I am 69, have used the "sock cure" for about 15 years. I leave them on in winter, heavy nylon, wool or synthetics and sometimes long ones. I have been troubled with very painful cramps in my lower legs just above my ankles and in my feet and keeping them warm with warm socks seems to take care of the trouble.

Other readers have written that a folded warm blanket over the feet helps. The verdict thus far: Good warm socks do help. What is your experience?

There are several reasons why warm socks can help. Muscles are made up of structures that behave like a coiled spring. When they are warm, the spring hangs loose, and when they get cold, they contract. The contraction can be forceful and become a cramp. Any muscle that is chilled is likely to cramp.

Then why the legs and not the rest of the body? The warmth of muscles is dependent upon their metabolism. The working muscle generates heat and is warm. The heat of the warm blood contributes to warmth. The legs are more distant from the heart than any other part of the body and, when you are asleep, the amount of blood flowing to the legs is not always enough to supply heat to the inactive muscles. Covering any muscle helps prevent heat loss. As one gets older and the circulation is not so good, then the socks help retain body heat and prevent cramping.

Yes, a cramp can be relieved by stretching the muscle. It stretches the coiled spring, so to speak. External heat, such as a hot tub or hot sock or heating pad, also helps. Once the cramp has occurred, the muscle with its internal springs needs to be stretched to relieve the condition or the cramp will persist a long time.

In India

Cremation Line Is Endless

BADURIA, India (AP) — The procession to Baduria's cremation ghat with the bodies of refugees from East Pakistan is endless.

Until mid-June, cholera was the main killer among the poorly dressed, shelterless refugees in this jute center 45 miles from Calcutta and in hundreds of other refugee camps along the East Pakistan frontier.

Now bronchial pneumonia, fever, chicken pox and measles, all aggravated by the monsoon rains that began last weekend, are taking their toll.

Relief officials in Calcutta fear the death toll may rise sharply in the next few weeks when the monsoons intensify.

The officials say that thanks to medicines rushed to India from around the world, they were able to quell last month's cholera epidemic, which took more than 5,000 lives.

But they still desperately need foreign help for tents, tarpaulins and waterproofing material to provide shelter for an estimated two million refugees living in the open.

Although about 7,000 miles of six-foot-wide shelter material is needed immediately, according to government estimates, only about 200 miles of material has been obtained from foreign and local sources so far.

An official of the refugee rehabilitation directorate in Calcutta said: "We cannot wait months for tarpaulins. The monsoon has already set in and disease and deaths will soon keep mounting unless some shelter is arranged."

With the monsoon rains spreading human wastes through the refugee communities, the officials expressed fear that cholera could strike a second time—and with greater force than before. He said only about a third of the six million refugees in India have been inoculated against cholera.

Refugee Despair

A little youngster wearily rests his head on his knee in the camp for Pakistani refugees near the Dum Dum Airport in Calcutta, India, recently. Millions of Pakistanis fled their country and entered India during the recent civil war in East Pakistan. (UPI)

The lucky refugees are those who have been admitted to semi-permanent camps, built with tents and tarpaulins. But even in these, refugees frequently have to walk through ankle-deep mud because of poor or nonexistent drainage facilities.

Residents Protested Tocks Island Dam

By JAMES V. LAMB
Associated Press Writer

STROUDSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Harry Koutz once could stand on his front porch and watch the Delaware River flow past his farm toward the sea.

Now his farm is gone, and Koutz dead. Friends say he died protesting. "You're ruining it! You're ruining it! Get off my land!"

At the bottom of a grassy slope near Koutz' abandoned and tumbling farm home, work is scheduled to start before autumn on a massive, earth-filled dam that for better or worse will dramatically alter much of the life and ecology of the area.

The 160-foot high Tocks Island Dam, 3,200-feet-long, will create a 12,425-acre reservoir 37.5 miles long, along a small valley of farms and woods between eastern Pennsylvania and western New Jersey.

Many of the small dairy farms already are starting to disappear as they are purchased to make way for the reservoir and surrounding park. Vacant houses, their porches sagging, chimneys toppling, dot the countryside.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers estimates the cost of acquiring the land and building the dam at $259 million.

The dam was authorized by Congress in 1962 to provide flood control, a reservoir for recreation and water supply, and electricity.

Conservationists argue that the flood control benefits don't justify the cost. They claim that the shifting levels of the reservoir will impair its recreation value, that the power idea is foolish and that the water will be too choked with algae in a few years for drinking or swimming.

Work was supposed to start on the dam this spring. In April, however, Russell Train, chairman of the Council of Environmental Quality, ordered a broad environmental study which delayed start of construction for 60 to 90 days. Proponents claim it's been studied enough. Conservationists argue the right questions weren't asked or answered in the earlier studies.

In August, 1955, floods spawned by two hurricanes rolled out of the nearby Pocono Mountains, killing 102 persons and causing damages in the millions. Downstream, Easton and Bristol, Pa., and other communities were inundated.

The Delaware River Basin Commission estimated the dam would prevent an average of $1.93 million a year in flood damages. It also estimates the dam would have prevented 97 per cent of the flood damage downstream in the 1955 floods.

Harold Lockwood, chairman of the Save the Delaware Coalition, contends any such benefits would not warrant the expenditure and the damage the dam would cause to the environment.

He says much of the flood damage could be prevented by local flood control works, such as dikes, and by moving houses and industry off the flood plain, the lowlands along the river.

"And," he recalled, "when they talk of the 102 lives lost in the 1955 flood, not one of them occurred on the main stem of the river."

The National Park Service will control the recreation area, a 55,000-acre park. It estimates 20 million people live within 75 miles of the park and 30 million within 100 miles.

The park service estimates 10 million visitors a year to the area. By 1990, plans call for 19 public beaches, 6 boat docks, 130 boat ramps on the reservoir itself, plus other beaches and boating facilities elsewhere, picnic sites, trails and camp sites.

Lloyd Duscha, chief of the engineering division of the engineer's Philadelphia office, said he believes the conservationists are taking too narrow a view in their objections. "I think the conservationists are centering on the issue of conservation alone and not on the benefits this project may be providing. In other words they have no real substitute for what it will provide. I think in order to criticize the project they should have a viable alternative."

Says conservationist Lockwood:

"Part of our position is that this is a misplaced priority when there are so many other great social needs that the money could be spent for."

Rehabilitation Big Question in Prison

By TOM TIEDE

RAMSEY, N. J. — (NEA) — Fourteen years ago, a dull, aimless young man named Edgar Smith picked up a 15-year-old high school girl and took her for an automobile ride. Shortly after, police arrested the man for the girl's murder. They charged that he had driven her to a Ramsey sand pit, beat her, raped her, then killed her. A jury believed it. And Smith was found guilty, sentenced to death and sent to the New Jersey State Penitentiary to await electrocution.

Today Smith is still alive. Mostly, anyway. He lives in a 7 x 10-foot concrete cell where, over the years, he has become not only the longest occupant of a death house in U.S. history, but an uncomfortable itch on America's conscience.

Smith, you see, maintains, eloquently maintains, he's innocent. He's written two books and helped attorneys prepare countless briefs to prove it.

How could he have raped that girl, he asks in one book, when a medical examination indicated she died a virgin? And if that prosecution point is so weak, then, surely, what with reasonable doubt, etc., shouldn't his case be reconsidered?

Many judges over the years have, in effect, agreed with the prisoner's plea. And, most recently, a U.S. district court judge decided to do something about it: Rather than just stay Edgar Smith's death sentence again, he decided the condemned man was entitled to be free on bail and afterward either be tried or left alone.

As it happens, Smith is still not free. The state of New Jersey is fighting his release. And so are many New Jersey citizens who shudder at the thought of letting a convicted murderer loose. Ramsey citizens are especially opposed to mercy for Smith. As one woman who knew the murdered girl says: "They should throw away the key. He killed her and everybody knows it. I don't care how many books he's written, he killed her and he's go to pay for doing that awful thing."

And so it is that Edgar Smith remains a prisoner, locked up, confined, isolated from decent folk, an example of how, as psychologist-criminologist Dr. Karl Menninger says it: "Much of the public clings to its yen for vengeance."

Society believes Smith is guilty. Society believes guilty men should pay for their deeds. Therefore, society is insisting that prisoner Smith rot in jail for his.

But the curious and most important aspect of the Edgar Smith controversy has nothing to do with his guilt or innocence. Indeed, it's doubtful, probably impossible, that his guilt or innocence will ever be truly known. Yet, so what?

The important thing, as some argue, is that Smith is a rehabilitated man — therefore, guilty or no, he should be returned to society. "If prisons are to work, they can't be just repositories for people waiting to die," says one Midwestern warden. "They must be places where useless men are confined only until they are useful. The idea of modern penology maintains that prisons should not be punishing chambers, but rather hospitals where men and women are sent to get well."

Not surprisingly, this modern penal idea is repugnant to many, maybe most, people. In Ramsey, as illustration, the idea of coddling a murderer is altogether out of the question: "If a guy robs a store and then gets out of jail, O.K., that's one thing. But anybody who murders somebody is a nut and should be kept away."

The feeling is deep; yet, according to statistics, also false.

FBI records (which can hardly be accused of being soft on crooks) indicate that murderers are not necessarily the hardest and most incorrigible of criminals. Most men in prison for homicide are in prison for the first time. Most are not professional felons, but victims of sudden impulses. The FBI says family arguments account for fully one-fourth of all murders; the FBI also says that murder is not as much a traditional law enforcement phenomenon as it is a social consequence.

This isn't to say the FBI believes a man who bumps off his wife to be excused. But it does suggest the perpetrators are often rather ordinary people. And so there may be some better legal solution then to just lock them away forever.

Consequently, according to enlightened penology, Edgar Smith should be given another chance, if he deserves it. And, judging from his records, he may deserve it.

He is in no way the same lump of ignorance he was when the murder took place. In those days, then called "Smitty," he was a high school dropout and insensitive drifter. He had held eight jobs in five years, none for more than nine months at a stretch. Since then, his personal slate has been clean, even admirable. He was found guilty of a prison infraction in 1963 (for refusing to shave) but he has also educated himself by correspondence, counseled other prisoners on legal rights and substantially contributed to his own and his nation's intelligence.

So, will he be free? Perhaps. Then, again, perhaps not. Because, as physchiatrist Menninger, for one, is quick to point out: "If we could total it up, we might find our crimes against criminals would outweigh their crimes against us."

Sights on Future

Sighting in his transit to check the depth of the ditch being dug by a backhoe at Third National Bank's drive-in facilities at 400 West Broadway, Edwin Taylor, Route 2, helps construct three additional lanes of traffic for bank customers. The bank will install a pneumatic tube system at the new traffic islands, according to bank president Henry Harris, who said that additional parking facilities will be constructed east of the building.

Produced Minsky Doing His Own Thing

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What can you say about a man who decided at the age of 55 to do his own thing?

Well, as Howard Minsky says it, "I'd been a pretty well paid executive all of my life, but I'd reached the point where I couldn't keep making deals for other people. I wanted to find out if I could do it for myself."

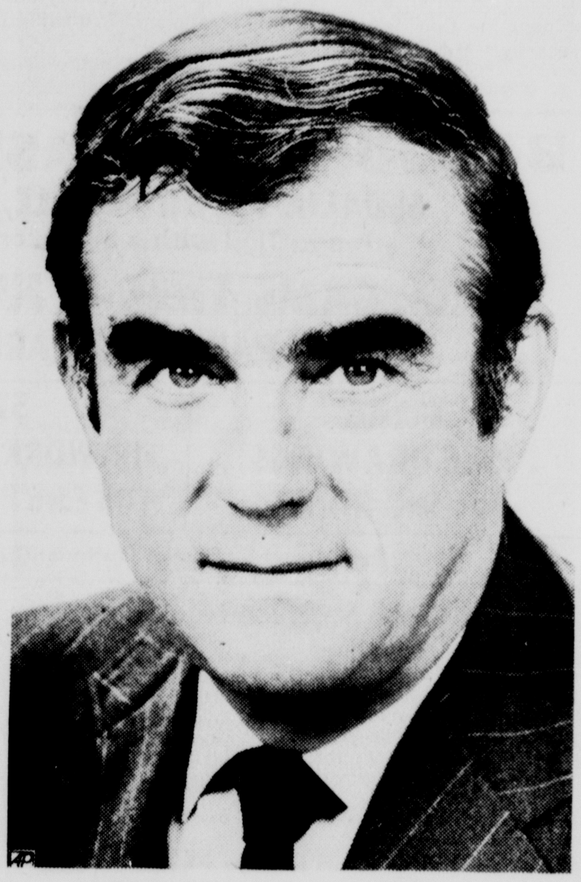
Leaving his job as motion picture department head for a talent agency, Minsky went into motion picture production. Many men have made first films no one has heard of. Not Minsky. His first feature was a little package called "Love Story."

The film cost about $2.25 million to make, says Minsky. "It recouped the total cost in the first three days of its release ad by the end of May it had $35 million in film rentals."

Minsky, now 57, is quick to note that while "Love Story" is quite a success story "I could just as easily have fallen on my face. There's a fine line between the guy who finishes first and the guy who finishes second. You only hear about the man who finished first."

The handsome, heavy-browed Minsky says he had just left his job when he was given the "Love Story" script by author Erich Segal's agent with the remark "You're a square, you might go for it."

Minsky read the script and "I fell in love with it. Not with what I read but with what I knew we could do with it." He and Segal met and a number of changes in the script were made, among them the changing of the girl into an Italian Roman Catholic from a Brooklyn Jewish girl.



Howard Minsky...producing films

"I wanted a conflict between a New England WASP and a New England Catholic," Minsky says. "This, to me, was more effective than what could have been an 'Abie's Irish Rose.'"

After five drafts and two rewrites, the script was ready for shooting and Minsky "knew it would be successful. No one agreed with me, but I knew it would make money.

"A producer is a man that bets on his taste. He puts his money where his emotions are. Then he assembles all the professional elements necessary to make it happen. I knew 'Love Story' would succeed, but I never anticipated it would be the success it was."

Minsky, a relaxed, easy-spoken man, adds that "I knew everyone was waiting for a 'Love Story.' I'm pro and I know my business. I'd seen all the filth and dirt and obscenity and I'd been embarrassed at movies with my wife.

"I knew there was an older audience waiting for a beautiful picture. And I believed the kids were waiting for one because they'd never seen anything like it.

"It's a woman's picture that men love. It's a good cry. The audience can come out of the theater with the feeling of having had a good time."

After scoring big with a property like "Love Story," what does Minsky plan to do for an encore?

"I'm working on a picture called 'Gangster,'" he says, adding, "It is not a gangster picture, not an underworld story."

He won't talk much about the project because "I don't want to tip my mitt." But he does say that the film, still in the scripting phase, "will be a story of today. Our society, the world we live in today, is causing attitudes to grow for which there seemingly is no explanation.

"Why do people take drugs? Why do the young people do the things they do? There is a confusion in the world. The film will try to talk about these things; they will be the canvas on which the picture is painted."

Strikes Are Costly

LONDON (AP) — Strikes cost Britain 10,397,000 working days in the first five months of 1971, more than twice the 4,040,000 days lost in January-May 1970, the Ministry of Trade and Industry announced today.

Warehouse License Law Is Signed By Hearnes

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JEFFERSON CITY — Legislation recently signed into law by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes makes it mandatory that any warehouseman in Missouri who stores grain for a fee must have his business licensed under the provisions of the Missouri Grain Warehouse Law or the Federal Warehouse Act.

The new law applies to all public warehouses not now licensed under provisions of the U.S. Federal Warehouse Act, it was reported.

The new provision goes into effect Sept. 28. Dexter Davis, commissioner of agriculture, said that on or before that day owners of existing unlicensed warehouses in Missouri must file an application for a license, accompanied by a $25 fee, to the agriculture department.

Under previous regulations, public warehouse licensing was optional unless warehousemen obtained a license in order to qualify for a uniform grain storage agreement with the Commodity Credit Corp.

According to James C. Dunscombe, the agriculture department's director of Grain, Feed and Seed Program, there are currently 106 grain warehouses in Missouri that hold state licenses and about 120 that are federally licensed. An additional 150 are expected to apply for a license when the new regulations go into effect.

Besides the application fee, an annual license fee will be computed on the basis of the capacity of each warehouse, as follows:

1 to 100,000 bushels, $50; 100,001 to 200,000, $100; 200,001 to 400,000, $150; 400,001 to 600,000, $200; 600,001 to 1,000,000, $300.

Unlicensed public warehousemen who desire further information may contact James C. Dunscombe of the Grain, Feed and Seed Program, Missouri Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 630, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Princeton Rejection Brings 'Disgrace'

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for all parents who attach a great deal of importance to certain colleges. My brother did — and it nearly ruined his youngest boy's life. I hope this story will open the eyes of other parents and deter them from making the same mistake.

My brother went to Princeton — as Father and Grandfather did before him. Two of our uncles also went to Princeton. When my brother's oldest boy graduated from high school, he went to Princeton, naturally. Two years later the younger boy, Jamie, applied to Princeton. He had excellent grades and was highly recommended by his principal but for some reason he was not accepted.

I have never felt so sorry for anyone in my life. That poor kid was made to feel that he had let the entire family down. The sad part of it was that his parents didn't do one thing to lift his spirits. They treated him as if he'd done some terrible thing.

Instead of accepting the decision, my brother got on the phone and started calling everyone he knew who might "help." He wrote letters, sent telegrams — it was shameful. In the meantime, the boy was getting sicker and sicker over the "disgrace" he had brought on the family. Finally he had to be hospitalized.

It is now two months later and Jamie is much better — and preparing to go to Notre Dame, his second choice. But the damage done by his family will leave a permanent scar on that boy.

I hope you will print this letter for all parents to see. — Aunt Betty.

Dear Aunt Betty: Thanks for writing. Not all boys belong at Princeton — or at Notre Dame, either. Some students do better at smaller, less prestigious schools, where the competition isn't so severe. Thanks for saying something that needed to be said.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I will soon be 65. For years we have been looking forward to retirement — making plans to do things we've always wanted to do but we never had the time, money or freedom. Last year we decided to move up north, about 200 miles. We found an ideal cottage, surrounded by trees and hills with a beautiful little trout brook nearby. To us it looked like heaven. We planned to go up next week and buy it, but we are having trouble with our three children. They say we have no business leaving them — that grandparents are supposed to be on hand as sitters, to help out when someone gets sick, to take care of the kids when they want to go on a vacation, or for a weekend, to hem skirts and shorten sleeves. Our son has always depended on his dad to help him in his business, on weekends, holidays and often evenings.

My husband and I never realized how much we did for our children until this matter of moving came up.

Now we feel guilty. How much do we owe our grown children? Please help us decide what is right. — Silver Threads.

Dear Threads: It sounds as if you two have been leaned on plenty by your kids. Some parents need and want to be a vital part of their children's lives — forever and ever. In fact, they keep their children dependent for this very reason. But parents who want to be free of their grown children should not be bound by guilt to serve indefinitely as sitters, seamstresses, nurses, and what have you. I say move up north and enjoy the time of life for which the first was made.

Court Rules 'Jap' OK By Civil Rights

NEW YORK (AP) — While the word "Jap" used as a trademark may offend some sensibilities, it does not violate anyone's civil rights, a state Supreme Court justice has ruled.

The New York chapter of the Japanese-American Citizens League claimed the term was derogatory and injurious to its members because of the Japanese ancestry and sought to enjoin its use as a trademark to identify a collection of clothes designed by Takada, a Japanese living in Paris.

Daring Duck

There's always a diversion from fishing at Liberty Park lagoon when the fish decide to stay away from the bait. Here, 11-year-old David Steele, 1110 West Fourth, finds himself running out of bread loaves as these ducks help themselves to his generosity. When he was through with feeding them, Steele found out that ducks do not live by bread alone, thanks to their instinct to fish and find other food for themselves. (Democrat-Capital Photo)

Bats in Your Belfry? Here's Your Checklist

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — How's your belfry today? Any bats batting around in it?

The question has you worried, doesn't it? The world is so weird that it's hard to say whether you're in it or out of it, isn't it?

So maybe we'd better give you a quick mental checkup to see whether all your gears are grooving, right? Okay, here we go. All you have to do is answer the following questions:

Have you ever written an anonymous letter to your congressman?

When your wife is ill and you have to do the laundry, how many cups of detergent do you use? One to three? Four to five?

If you really got mad enough to kill somebody, would you rather do it by shooting him with a bow and arrow, pouring molten lead on him, or stuffing him with sandy spinach? Would the fact that lead is poisonous affect your decision?

As a child did you ever get your hands spanked for putting beans up your nose?

Are you still afraid of gypsies? Thunder and lightning? Your boss? Your mother-in-law's only daughter?

Can you light a cigarette with your left hand while chinning yourself with your right hand?

Does it make you feel sexy all over when you hear somebody say "vice versa?"

When you see a picture on television showing a family eating, do you head for the refrigerator for a snack at the first program break?

Is there any heredity in your family? If so, how much?

If no one in the supermarket was looking, which would you steal first: a can of dog food, a package of cat food, or a frozen breaded veal cutlet?

Can you look yourself in the eye and honestly tell yourself that you are exactly the kind of man your mother wanted you to grow up to be? If not, what defect in your mother's character caused you to fail?

Can you recall any occasion when the knowledge of algebra you gained as a high school freshman helped save your life later? Is this your fault?

How low down can you sometimes get when you're really feeling high?

If you transpose a juxtoposition in a right angle triangle, is that legal justification for you to transfuse an adenoidal octoploid?

Those are the questions. Now I suppose you want to know your score. Well, first let me ask you one final question, and then you can probably figure out your own score.

Do you think anyone who takes the time to sit down and answer a series of questions like these is anywhere normal to begin with?

Girl Questions Lumps in Sugar

LONDON (AP) — Jackie Calaway lumped it and the British National Innovations Center liked it.

The 11-year-old blonde girl decided "brown sugar was better but lumps are more convenient."

"I wrote to the big sugar firms to ask why there were no brown sugar lumps, but none of them replied," she told newsmen.

So she made her own lumps, mixing "ordinary brown sugar with just the right amount of water and left it to harden in the icetray in our fridge."

For her idea, the innovations center sent her $12.

Cosmetics Company Gets Suit

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A suit has been filed against a Florida cosmetics firm alleging the company violated a consent order to which it agreed in March in Kansas City.

The suit, filed by the Missouri attorney general in Jackson County Circuit Court, names Koscot Interplanetary Inc. of Orlando, Fla.; Midwest Koscot Distributors Inc. of St. Louis, two Florida men and nine from St. Louis.

The suit asks for a restraining order, an injunction directing compliance with the order and civil penalties of $5,000 from each defendant for each violation.

The suit alleges that the violations occurred in St. Louis.

Action on a hearing date and restraining order is expected to be taken today.

The suit filed Tuesday said Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth learned of alleged violations of the March agreement, primarily representations to recruits that they could earn substantial income with little effort through the retail selling of cosmetics.

The constitutionality of the Missouri consumer protection law was challenged by the corporation in a suit in 1970, but it lost.

In the consent decree, the company pledged to stop practices the attorney general had challenged as constituting a referral selling scheme.

No Charges Filed In K.C. Shooting

KANSAS CITY (AP) — No charges have been filed in the fatal shooting early Tuesday of Larry Coberts, 22, a professional football player who was to have reported to the Cleveland Browns rookie camp July 11.

The prosecutor has turned the case over to the grand jury for investigation.

Roberts died of a bullet wound in the lower chest.

Willie Earl Minis, 33, told authorities Roberts attempted to force his way into the Minis home about 1:30 a.m. Minis said he frightened away two other men who had been with Roberts outside his home.

Roberts was nude. Sgt. John Cowdrey said the football player's clothes were found in the street near the house.

Roberts was a running back at Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg and played in preseason games last year with Winnipeg in the Canadian League.

Ginger Snaps

By Ginger Moore

Instead of being part of the machine age do you ever feel like you're part of the machine revolt? The last few weeks I have begun to notice that certain mechanical devices have become downright hostile to ordinary work.

The vacuum cleaner just sits there quietly refusing to make any sound at all, but my self-defrosting refrigerator hums merrily while allowing three inches of ice to accumulate in the bottom of the freezer.

The stove is working great, but the food I cook has also been trained to revolt. Last night the boiling water I was fixing spaghetti in leaped out of the pan and doused me and my floor with boiling water. (The floor could use the cleaning, but I would have preferred lukewarm water). On top of that when I finally got the water emptied, the spaghetti jumped out of the pan onto the sink and floor. (Thereby dirtying the previously mopped floor).

Lately cabinet doors which have always closed meekly, bounce back and hit me in the head and cords which have always laid on the floor now jump up to trip me. It seems highly unlikely that footstools which have always remained in place can now walk across the room with the intent of sending an unsuspecting person into orbit around the living room, but they do.

During the summer is when cars usually illustrate their independence by either freezing you to death with the air conditioner or refusing to operate the air conditioner at all. Since a car has so many accessories and parts, the list of possible annoyances it thinks up are endless, but every car seems to manage to come up with some.

Washing machines have been known to chew up clothes and dryers burn them. Blenders have been known to redecorate kitchens in 'early orange juice' and mixers add polka-dots to a white wall.

One would think that since we can put men on the moon and transport hundreds of people around the country in a matter of hours by plane, this country could learn to negotiate with machines.

Perhaps the machines are hoping for a union. People unions have successfully negotiated shorter work weeks and higher pay. Maybe the machines want only half-days work and an extra dab of oil.

At any rate, people have become so dependent on various machines that we will have to agree to their terms at any cost. And besides what can compare to the excitement of wondering what is going to go wrong with which appliance today?

Thanks go to Mrs. Leona Schouten who in response to my last column sent me a clipping from the current Reader's Digest which presents "The View From the Back Seat" a humorous article by Bill Vaughan on traveling with parents. Now that I look back on the days I traveled with my parents, I must admit that Mr. Vaughan has a point.

Exercises Can Help Save Face

By AP Newsfeatures

It's the little muscles under the skin of your face that keep your skin from sagging, and the difference between youthful skin and the old crepey look may be in exercising those muscles, says a well-known exercise consultant, Marjorie Craig. Her new book, "Face Saving Exercises," illustrates how to lift those sagging face muscles in the way nature intended.

In five days, an exercise following Miss Craig's plan goes from facial exercises that involve the scalp raiser muscles —the frontalis, corrugator supercili and the eye muscles—orbicularis oculi, tensor tarsi, and palpebral—to the triangularis muscle at the mouth corners. On the sixth day, you work on the under-chin and throat area and do all 30 exercises in the six-day program.

The exercises are done in a pattern worked out by Miss Craig in her book, "The 21-day Shape-up Program."

Miss Craig looks much younger than her 58 years and it is difficult to detect a line or wrinkle in her face. She has the figure of a model. For 35 years, she has devised and adapted exercises to meet the needs of the body.

After receiving a degree in education, she took a postgraduate course in physical therapy at Columbia University Medical School.

Here's a simple exercise to smooth out the "crow's-feet" area of the eyes:

Stand close to a mirror. Raise your eyebrows and lift upper lids until you see the whites of your eyes above the iris. Slowly begin to bring upper and lower lids together until you appear slit-eyed. Think about both lids resisting each other as you bring them together. To do this properly, you will need to concentrate—the upper lids should not move down at a faster rate than the lower lids move up. Now, slowly open your eyes, again thinking of resisting as you concentrate on moving the upper and lower lids apart at the same slow pace.

The exercise is done five times, counting each time lids are brought together.

Suntanning Clothes

Take a tip from the Mexican National Tourist Council. When traveling in Mexico, or even for sunning in your own backyard, skimpy tops and cut-off jeans (left) are your best companions. Choose the western look of indigo blue or go with regimental stripes. Both in denim, the shorts and fashionable answers for summer sunning. The tied cotton top is in a bandana print and to show off that tan a white tank top is perfect. Get into the swim (right) this summer with swimwear styled in brightly colored cotton prints. This star and sailboat motif in seagoing colors of blue, green and white is the perfect combination for the crisp looking bikini and matching kimono-styled coverup.

Advice Offered For European Travelers

By JEANNE O'MALLEY
Written for Associated Press

The minute you announce you're going to Europe this summer, people will come from miles around to give you advice.

Some of it, like "Take twice as much money and half as many clothes," is as true as it was the day Baedeker left home.

But you'll find most of the free advice you get is for finding wonderful little places to eat. What's needed is advice on how to feel like eating when you get there.

The biggest blight on a three-week vacation is jet lag. The only sure way not to have jet lag is to take a boat. But if you fly, try to get a flight that leaves during the day, and, failing that, try to get some sleep on the plane. This means taking a sleep mask and ear plugs, because there are always those who talk until two in the morning, and the minute they subside, others who'll put up the shade to watch the sunrise.

Whether you sleep or not, by the time you get where you're going, you'll be fully prepared to believe it's five in the afternoon instead of 10 in the morning, and by the time the local bedtime arrives, you'll be ready.

Making it through the first night is the hardest part of jet lag because you can depend on being awakened. First it will be your stomach. It may be three o'clock in the morning in London but your stomach knows it's really eight o'clock in Chicago and it wants its dinner. So take along something to keep it quiet until morning. Save the milk and sugar packets from the plane. Give it a doughnut. Doughnuts don't mind being squashed in a plastic bag and will keep fresh long enough for your stomach to get on the local time schedule.

The next to wake you up will be your roommate. All European bathrooms have the light switch outside the door on the theory that you won't be so apt to electrocute yourself if they keep the switch out of arm's reach of the running water. So every time your roommate gets up in the night, he's going to wake you up turning on the light. Take one of those little nightlights and plug it into the shaver outlet.

Be on the lookout for UFOs. It's a rare European hotel that has window screens, and flying objects up to and including pigeons can come in your window. There's nothing more persistent than a French mosquito unless it's a heavy-footed Italian fly, so take a bottle of insect repellent.

The next thing that can blight your vacation is having your clothes come out looking like they'd been tied if not dyed. The answer to this is the plastic bag.

Pack your dresses and suits in the plastic bags from the cleaners. They retain just enough air to keep things from wrinkling. If it's something really fragile like pleated crepe or organdy, put it in a bag, blow it up like a balloon, and fasten it with cellophane tape. And pack that tape.

This method works for all kinds of things: packed mink, which normally comes out looking like licked cat; wigs, if you don't want the bother of a wig carrier; it even works for fresh flowers. So if you get going-away flowers or are met with them on your arrival, don't leave them behind for the maid. Put them in a plastic bag and pack them. They'll come out surprisingly well, and brighten up the dreariest hotel room.

One of the handiest things you can have is an electric coil but be sure it will work on 220 volts, or wait until you get to Europe to buy one. Then you can fill suitcase corners with plastic bags of instant coffee, tea or even bouillon cubes for times when you've had a hard day and just want to stay in and rest your feet.

Plastic bags also are good for washing powder and the washing you haven't got around to doing. And pack not one inflatable hanger, but several. You won't feel like washing every night. So if the washing stacks up, and especially if you're traveling with a man, you won't end up quarreling about who gets to use the hanger.

Nearly as handy as the plastic bag is a package of old-fashioned tissue paper. If you've saved up all winter for a travel trousseau and then find the drawers and shelves in your hotel room a bit grubby, spread out a few pieces of tissue paper.

Guard against unexpected nuisances that pop up to spoil things. If you wear glasses and don't want to take an extra pair, take your prescription. It'll save time in case the unexpected happens. If you have a special medical problem, take your prescriptions. The local embassies or your hotel clerk will put you in touch with an English-speaking doctor but it will help him to know what your medication has been.

To avoid the nuisance of a cold, take at least one set of warm clothing. There's nothing sadder than a group of American tourists shivering in dripdry cottons when it has suddenly decided to snow on the Fourth of July. Everyone knows enough to take a raincoat, collapsible umbrella, and walking shoes, but too few take sweaters.

The thing that happens most often to spoil vacations is losing your suitcase. If your case is elephant grey like everybody else's, put some kind of identifying marking or tape on it, and always a name-tag. And take everything you need to get by overnight—or even for a day or two—in a small case or tote-bag.

Suntanning Suggestions Given

Each year about this time, the sun's dazzling rays bring about the sport of Tanning. It's a process that can be both fun and healthy if done wisely. Play it smart, enjoy the benefits of nature for all they're worth. Stretch on the sand, exercise in the water, see that all of you gets more beautiful, more glowing, happier. The key to this glorious adventure is to follow dermatologist's advice: LIMIT YOUR SUNNING!

You can look gloriously brown without resembling a prune if you start with a slow, gradual exposure to the sun. First, treat yourself to the sun even before the beach season by wearing bare midriff shirts and hip slung skirts. Then, after your skin has adapted to the sun's rays you can enjoy the summer days in a knock-out bikini.

It's also important to recognize when you've had enough sun. That's the time to make use of sunscreening lotions and adorable beach cover-ups which help keep out the burning rays. This year's beachwear makes the sun scene with more versatility and femininity than ever. So, when you want to stop sunning, shade your bikini clad self with matching mini cover-ups or long, swirling, coordinated skirts. And don't forget the perky look of culotte overalls!

Complement your tan with the bright colors of a calico print in polyester and cotton or choose bold strippings in brushed denim for a slimming look. Sensational sun clothes styled in romantically flowered prints will softly enhance your beautiful look.

About Town

The Annual Gerhardt reunion was held recently at the Bunceton Park.

The Hoard family reunion was held at Farrington Park in Windsor last Sunday. Many families attended from this area. The day was spent visiting and taking pictures.

The Friench Gulick family reunion was held Sunday at Liberty Park. Officers elected for the coming year were: Miss Beverly Elam, president; Miss Ann Loney, vice president; and William Oswald, secretary-treasurer.

Prizes for being married the longest went to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fowler and the youngest person present was Holly Renee Craig, age two months.

Curls for Summer

Curls, curls and more curls is hair fashion for summer and Alexandre and Jacques Dessange are the curl kings of Paris. French women are taking to this softer look for hair styles in contrast to the wide shoulders and tailored suits of the couture designers.

Ways to Prevent Curling Zippers

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — Gloria can keep the zipper in her turtleneck sweater from curling if she sprays the inside with spray starch and then irons the tape. — LYNDA R.

DEAR POLLY — Gloria wanted help with her curling zippers. I solved this by pinning them, wet, to my ironing board and leaving until dry. Stretch to the proper length, fasten through the tape top and bottom and allow to dry in this position. I use needles for pinning instead of pins to prevent any chance of rust. — CATHERINE

DEAR GIRLS — Bulging zippers are sometimes caused when a washable fabric shrinks more than the zipper tape. — POLLY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — My priceless pewter pieces were long neglected due to my not knowing that there was such a thing as pewter polish. Now that is not really doing the job, especially in hard-to-reach places. Is there any other method of cleaning pewter? I would deeply appreciate hearing. — MR. R. M. S.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the companies who make products for electric dishwashers that make glasses sparkle but do not make something for those of us who do not have dishwashers. We rinse our dishes, too. — MRS. F. J. F.

DEAR POLLY — I am a mother of small children and find keeping a safety pin on my key chain is very handy. After coming home from any trip in the car I pin my keys to my sweater, coat or dress as soon as I take them out of the ignition. This saves worrying about where I had put them when I pulled out all the paraphernalia a mother has to lug in the house along with the children. When we reach the door, loaded down and tired, there is no digging in my purse looking for the key. — L. M. B.

Soviet Achievement Marred By Tragedy

The world stands numb. Three men, adventurers of a type born only in the last decade, are dead. Brave men, with strange names — Dobrovolsky, Volkov, Patsayev — Russian cosmonauts found dead inside their space ship Wednesday.

The fact that they are Russian certainly does not diminish their courage or their achievement. They made it possible for the Soviet Union to attain a goal long cherished by the United States — establishment of mankind's first manned orbital space laboratory.

But such thoughts are petty in view of Wednesday's tragedy. Russia's space efforts, now marred by disaster for the second time, still deserve admiration and respect.

It is certainly unfortunate that three men died after their long stay in space, but it may be hoped that their accomplishments will, eventually, benefit every nation.

All three men were married and had children. At this hour of mourning men everywhere should remember the grief of these three families and a word of prayer may also be in order.

Let us wait until later to debate whether the lives lost are too high a price to pay in our quest for knowledge of what awaits man in space. Let us delay our judgment.

Instead, let everyone remember that Dobrovolsky, Volkov and Patsayev were extremely brave and heroic men. They have earned their place in history.

BERRY'S WORLD

"My feeling is that if more men would share in some of the household responsibilities, like this, there wouldn't be such a hassle about women's lib!"

"THE FRONT PAGE IS TOP SECRET. THE BACK PART IS HIGHLY CLASSIFIED."

Experts Ignored By Brass

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A most worrisome aspect of the Pentagon Vietnam papers is their evidence on how frequently high officials of the government have ignored facts presented by their professional subordinates whether these professionals were in the Pentagon, the State Department or Central Intelligence Agency.

Cromley

Sometimes the unpleasant or "nonconforming" data was screened out by White House assistants, sometimes by the President.

The Vietnam papers, of course, don't tell the whole story.

One reasonably high official with access to President Johnson and with some considerable technical skill at analyzing military action reports told me that in a face-to-face session, he warned the President that the messages from the officers involved in the Tonkin Gulf attack on U.S. destroyers were too vague and inconclusive, and that they should be treated with extreme caution.

Johnson looked up and said sharply: "When your advice is wanted you will be asked for it. Good day."

Shortly after the official was transferred to a post out of the direct line of action.

Those who said what pleased Johnson were moved in closer to his ear. There are other examples from one administration and another.

The evidence of the technicians was largely ignored in the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion. They were, in the main, overruled by men in the new Kennedy administration with little or no experience in this type of operation.

The technical evidence of the Defense Department's own top experts in guerrilla strategy and tactics was largely passed over in planning and fighting the Vietnam war. Search-and-destroy sweeps, aerial bombings of the type routinely ordered, the use of large numbers of conventional troops — all were anathema to those high officials and officers most experienced in guerrilla operations.

More recently, the Pentagon's own official research study on the lessons learned from the Vietnam war to be applied in any future similar situation has been put on the shelf. It hasn't been contradicted; it has been ignored.

Nader's Raiders Aim At VW 'Love Bugs'

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Ralph Nader has accused Volkswagen of concealing evidence from the public that the German "love bugs" are "potential firetraps."

In an unpublished complaint to Highway Safety Administrator Doug Toms, the consumer advocate charges that 1961-67 VWs have faulty fuel tank caps that dislodge and spray out gas.

There are 2,215,000 of these models on U.S. highways.

Even as Nader's complaint was mailed, his Center for Auto Safety was secretly finishing a major report highly critical of VWs.

The report, with hundreds of pages of backup documents, cites five safety shortcomings in VWs. Besides the gas cap charge, the report tells of door latch failures, roll overs, faulty front seat anchoring and limited passenger protection.

Nader's letter to Toms, a prelude to the sledge-hammer report, recalls a 1968-70 study of VW gas tank tops by the Federal Highway Traffic Safety Administration. The government closed the investigation without ordering VW to provide the owners of older VWs with new self-sealing caps.

Nader charges that VW "concealed from the Department of Transportation during the course of this investigation relevant and damaging VW tests in flagrant disregard of repeated information requests."

Calling upon Toms to reopen the investigation, Nader inquired whether the "concealment of this tested data" violates federal criminal statutes.

Five tests run by Volkswagen in 1966-67 show that its gas tank caps "dislodged" with some spillage at speeds from 30.6 to 32.6 miles per hour. The tests came to light last February in a court deposition by VW test engineer Ulreich Seiffert.

Nader said Seiffert's deposition "clearly indicates that Volkswagen deliberately withheld information to mislead (the government) and VW owners.

"Not only was Volkswagen able to deceive your investigators," Nader added crisply, "but the ridiculous tests conducted by (the government) defy explanation." He said the tests were woefully inadequate.

Footnote: Volkswagen vehemently denied its love bugs suffer from the five alleged defects cited in the still-secret Nader report. A VW spokesman said the firm had detailed studies to back up their denials. As for the "concealment charges," the spokesman said that "Volkswagen has always dealt with the public and with the government in good faith."

Justice Department lawyers, now preparing for the trial of the brothers Berrigan, are debating whether to introduce some unpublished love letters between Father Philip Berrigan and Sister Elizabeth McAlister.

The letters might make titillating newspaper copy but would add little to the case against Father Berrigan and his ecclesiastical conspirators. They are charged with plotting to kidnap White House advisor Henry Kissinger.

Privately, the government lawyers consider the indictment so full of holes that a conviction is impossible. It was patched together after FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover tipped the government's hand on the case and Attorney General John Mitchell had to make good on Hoover's goof.

The indictment was so poorly drawn that a new one was shoved through a grand jury, laying emphasis on the Berrigans' alleged rifling of draft records. There is a better chance, the attorneys feel, to make this charge stick.

They are wary about the testimony of their key witness, Boyd F. Douglas, the convict-informer who pretended to join the Berrigan band and then turned them in. The lawyers consider him an unsympathetic figure who will do them little good with the jury.

LBJ's Candidate — We reported on Jan. 4 that ex-President Lyndon Johnson was disenchanted with the leading Democratic presidential hopefuls and was threatening privately to back President Nixon for re-election in 1972. As part of the maneuver, we reported, LBJ might try to make a deal with Nixon to take John Connally, a Johnson protege, as running mate. Down on the Pedernales, LBJ is still muttering to friends about the political outlook. Of all the leading candidates, the former President has grumbled, the only one he can abide is Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.; otherwise, Nixon still would be a more acceptable alternative.

Bailey's Background — F. Lee Bailey, the fiery defender of Capt. Ernest Medina against My Lai massacre charges, is best known for such headline civilian cases as Sam Sheppard, the Boston Strangler and the Plymouth mail robbery. But actually, Bailey's first legal work was in military, not civilian trials. A fighter pilot at Cherry Point, N.C., he doubled as his group's legal officer in 1955 though he wasn't a lawyer. Using borrowed law books, he handled more then 200 cases, some as prosecutor, some as defense counsel. They ranged from spectacular moonshine charges to complicated insanity proceedings. My associate Les Whitten, whose biography "F. Lee Bailey" has just been published, also reports that Bailey as a boy was willing to fight four neighborhood boys at the same time and grew up to be a totally fearless fighter pilot in the Marines.

Hartke Huffs — Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., is in a huff over the appointment of his 1970 senatorial opponent, Richard Roudebush, to a top post in the Veterans Administration. The 1970 contest was one of the most bitter in Indiana history, and Roudebush must now do business with Hartke, who is chairman of the Senate Veterans Committee. For incredibly, Roudebush's main job, according to an official VA press release, will be to carry on "liaison with Congress."

New Pressure To Obtain Documentary

By CARL T. ROWAN

WASHINGTON — Members of the House Commerce Committee have let their egos overload their logic, so pride apparently is going to drive them to push contempt proceedings against Dr. Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Rowan

And that will produce another Constitutional confrontation every bit as historic as the great hassle between the newspapers and the government over "the Pentagon papers."

Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D.-W. Va.), chairman of the House Committee, wants Stanton held in contempt of Congress because Stanton refuses to give Congress all the films, scripts, and recordings that contributed to CBS' controversial documentary, "The Selling of the Pentagon."

Stanton would not be worth much as a guardian of the public interest if he did not invite a contempt citation, because what the Congressmen seek to do is contemptible.

They want to establish a precedent under which politicians who don't like a television presentation can call in the producers and their rough film and scripts and try to impugn their motives and judgment in editing the program.

The day isn't coming when an American newspaperman will turn over his notes, or recorded interviews, or photographs and let some Congressman or government official second-guess his choice of a lead, of quotes to emphasize, or photographs to print. The whole country is in trouble if Congress is permitted to single out television for this kind of bullying.

There has never been a television documentary of merit that did not irk some Congressman. Some Senators still curse "Harvest of Shame," the late Edward R. Murrow's great documentary on migrant workers.

A moss-backed minority in the Congress screamed angrily when television focused its cameras on the ugly truth of hunger in America.

"The Selling of the Pentagon" has won some lofty prizes, but that won't silence the howls of those who, out of vested interests, feel compelled to defend anything and everything about the defense establishment.

Can anyone imagine television networks ever doing worthwhile programs on controversial issues if they are always subject to second-guess harassment from bellyaching Congressmen who can pass judgment on whether the documentary meets their idea of "fairness"?

No group of politicians ought ever to have that kind of power, and it bespeaks a lofty level of arrogance, or conceit, that Rep. Staggers and Rep. William L. Springer (R.-Ill.) should imagine that the public wants them to exercise such power.

Stanton speaks for the preservation of a free society when he says:

"The chilling effect of both the subpoena and the inquiry itself is plain beyond all question. If newsmen are told that their notes, films, and tapes will be subject to compulsory process so that the government can determine whether the news has been satisfactorily edited, the scope, nature and vigor of their news gathering and reporting activities will inevitably be curtailed."

Staggers counters with the argument that television is so powerful it "sends chills up and down the spine of many men in this country." Calling the networks the nation's most powerful instruments of public opinion, he said they "can ruin every President, and every member of Congress."

Staggers needs to be reminded that the First Amendment protections of the press were designed precisely to keep a few chills running down the spines of those who spend the public's money and do the public's business. Those chills are what keep a lot of public servants honest, including Presidents.

If those Constitutional protections were justified for the written media 150 years ago, when their power was viewed as awesome, they are justified for television in this frightful new atomic era when a powerful, free press is all the more needed.

One could at least entertain Staggers' argument if the performance of the networks had been of such overweening abuse of power that numbers of honorable men were driven from public life into ruin. But such has not been the case; indeed, it might be said that the networks have dealt too gently with numerous scoundrels who deserved to be chased away from the public trough.

Stanton concedes that journalists make mistakes, including mistakes of judgment in editing. Some of the editing techniques used to prepare "The Selling of the Pentagon" are certainly questionable.

Staggers, Springer, and other Congressmen are within their rights to complain of what they think are errors, to attempt to call the public's wrath down upon an offending station or network. But the Constitution draws the line right there. And heaven help the people if the day ever comes when the politicians are given the bullying powers over this powerful medium that some House members now seek to seize.

South put his king of spades on East's jack and noted that he had eight top tricks with three possible extras in diamonds. So he led a diamond to dummy's king at trick two and returned the suit toward his own hand. East discarded the three of hearts.

South had a good opportunity to bemoan his tough luck, cash out his eight top tricks and settle for down one. That would be a loser's play, but this South was decidedly not a loser. He simply played a low diamond with the nonchalant manner of a man who had no worries about the hand.

There is nothing unethical about this. No man is required to look dismayed when things go wrong.

West believed South's cheerfulness and led his 10 of hearts, whereupon South cashed out four no-trump.

East was very annoyed with his partner. He felt that West should have played his ace of spades and given himself a chance. East pointed out that his three of hearts could not have been read as an encouraging discard.

East was right about that but East also was the villain of the piece.

East knew his partner had led fourth best. The only spades higher than the six-spot that East couldn't account for were the ace, 10 and seven. West was marked with all three and, therefore, East could have made things easy for his partner by simply discarding the queen of spades.

Between U.S. and U.S.S.R.

Peaceful Coexistence Reigns in Track As Well

BERKELEY, Calif. — (NEA) — The U.S.-U.S.S.R.-World All Stars track meet will be held here Friday and Saturday and things just aren't the same.

Used to be the U.S.-U.S.S.R. track meets were among the hottest confrontations of the cold war.

Used to be that American and Russian athletes toiled to underscore the physical virtues of their respective ideologies.

"I'd say what's happened is that a meet such as this isn't quite as intriguing as it was 10 years ago," says Dave Maggard, the 31-year-old University of California coach and former Olympian, who will head the U.S. contingent. "We all know a lot more about the Russians than we did in 1960.

"I think in the past the meets have been used politically," he said. "And I don't think they should be used that way. An event such as this should enhance the relationship between the two countries."

The first sign that the Russian athletes were no longer the curiosity of old occurred in 1969 when the U.S. and U.S.S.R. squads met in Los Angeles Coliseum and drew only 30,000 in two days.

Alarmed by the L.A. experience, Stanford, site of one of the most memorable of the meets in 1962, turned this year's event down. Thus Cal was given an opportunity to play host and school officials are hopeful of a two-day sellout in little (capacity 22,500) Edwards Stadium.

What the Cal faithful are likely to see is a hip-pocket preview of the 1972 Olympics, with a young Russian team, a star-dotted U.S. team (to be named after the Amateur Athletic Union championships a week prior to the meet) and a random sampling of some of the best from elsewhere. It will be simultaneously scored as a triangular and double dual meet.

"We expect the Russians to have a powerful team," said Maggard, "with some of their traditional strengths — the weights, javelin and walking events, for example.

"Their program is starting to show in areas where historically they haven't been as strong. They'll have two good high jumpers, for example — one of them, Kestutis Sapka, a 'flopper' — and a pretty fair group of sprinters for a change."

The sprint contingent is headed by Valeriy Borzov, a winner in the 1970 U.S.-U.S.S.R. meet in Leningrad. At 21, he is the oldest of the group.

The Soviets also have a good pair of middle-distance runners in Yevgeniy Arzhanov and Mikhail Zhelobovsky, the meet's defending champions in the 800- and 1,500-meter events.

But the brightest Russian stars are to be found in the field events — Viktor Saneyev, 1968 Olympic champion and world triple jump record holder, the only man ever to top 57 feet; Janis Lusis, Olympic javelin champion; and Anatoliy Bondarchuk, world record holder in the hammer throw.

The U.S. team should be strong in the sprints, hurdles, middle distances and some of the field events.

Randy Matson, Olympic champion and world shot put record holder (at 75¼ feet), has already thrown within four inches of his best at Cal and Jay Silvester, world record holder in the discus, should also make the show.

Rod Milburn, from Southern University, injects a bit of drama into the hurdles picture, having already turned in a 13-flat performance earlier this year.

The addition of Milburn to the Olympic one-two of Willie Davenport and Erv Hall would make the hurdles squad formidable.

Olympic champion Lee Evans will probably head a sprint group which is likely to include Cal's Eddie Hart, Kentucky's Jim Green, Southern Cal's Willie Deckard, UCLA's John Smith (who has beaten Evans this year in 440 yards), world 400-meter record holder Ralph Mann from Brigham Young, and Ben Vaughn, an Army runner.

Deckard, Green, Hart and Vaughn have all run 9.2-second 100-yard dashes.

In the middle distances, Maggard is hoping to see a repeat of the Marty Liquori-Jim Ryun showdown.

The World All Stars have a pair of Olympic champions — Kenyan steeplechase specialist Amos Biwott and 5,000-meter titlist Mohamed Gammoudi from Tunisia — plus 18-foot pole vaulter Chris Papanicolaou from Greece and 1964 Olympic long-jump champ Lynn Davies from Great Britain.

The Stars promise to make the sprint events and 400-meter relay memorable with a contingent headed by Jamaicans Lennox Miller and Don Quarrie. And Sweden's Ricky Bruch has already unofficially topped Silvester's discus mark, using a disc which was light by a quarter of an ounce.

Hedlund Wins 7th

Amos' Homer Leads Royals

ANAHEIM (AP)—Kansas City manager Bob Lemon may soon be changing his theory on his prize centerfielder, Amos Otis.

"He reminds me a lot of Willie Mays," Lemon observed earlier in the season. "He's fast, fields his position with a flair and he's exciting to watch. The only thing he doesn't have is Willie's power."

This is to report that Amos Otis and home runs aren't exactly strangers. They crossed paths again Tuesday night.

Otis led off the ninth inning with his 12th round tripper of the season, snapping a 1-1 deadlock and presenting the Royals with a 2-1 victory over the California Angels and Tom Murphy.

With a modest three-game winning streak working in their favor, the Royals send Bruce Dal Canton, 7-3, against the Angels tonight in an attempt to extend it. The Angels will counter with lefthander Rudy May, 3-5.

"I was hungry for a long one," Otis said with some satisfaction. "I hadn't hit one out since June 6 and it was beginning to bother me. Murphy was jamming me all night so I was looking for one inside in the ninth. Sure enough, there it was —nice and high, too."

Otis ripped the pitch into the Angel bullpen.

It was only the third hit of the night off Murphy, who was saddled with his 10th loss in 14 decisions.

"It's a shame to pitch like that and lose," moaned Angel manager Lefty Phillips. "It's hard to pitch better than that."

The loss was the 16th in 24 games for the sluggish Angels and they fell into fifth place in the American League West, one full game behind the Milwaukee Brewers.

Otis was also instrumental in Kansas City's other fruitful inning — the fourth. He lined a one-out single—the first hit off Murphy — and was chased to third when Ed Kirkpatrick bounced a bad-hop double over first base. Gail Hopkins followed with a sacrifice fly to create a 1-1 tie.

The Angels pushed over a run in the first off winner Mike Hedlund (7-4) on back-to-back doubles by rookie Mickey Rivers and old pro Tony Gonzalez.

Torre's Bat Rings

Cards Get Back On Victory Trail

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Wait and be quick; that's the name of the game," said Joe Torre, the major leagues' leading hitter and a rejuvenated player at age 30.

Torre, a catcher converted to third base, waited Tuesday night for a Luke Walker fast ball and swatted it over the left field wall in helping the St. Louis Cardinals conquer the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-3.

Torre's third home run in as many games came during a seven-run Cardinal third inning also featuring Lou Brock's lead off circuit clout.

The uprising also included winning pitcher Reggie Cleveland's three-run double off Walker (3-7) and a run-scoring double by Brock to cap the assault.

Cleveland (7-7) breezed to the finish with an eight-hitter marred only by Richie Hebner's 11th home run and two sacrifice flies by Al Oliver.

"You go through phases," said Torre, a slimmed-down 11-season major leaguer whose secret to a .372 batting mark is seeing the ball.

"Just keeping a still head has a lot to do with it, I guess, and not jumping at the ball. The better you see the ball and the longer you can wait to swing the better your chances to hit.

"You just have to be lucky and try to stay away from that extended slump. Not being tired; that goes a long way toward it."

Torre's homer, his 12th of the season, came with Jim Beauchamp aboard after Brock tagged Walker for a line drive shot down the left field line.

Walker fanned Jose Cardenal for a second out following the Torre blast but loaded the bases by issuing bases on balls to Jose Cruz and Dal Maxvill and yielding a single to Jerry McNertney.

Cleveland then doubled down the right field line to score three runs.

Most persons, especially those who stop by the local pub for a cold one on the way home from work, know that the price of beer is higher today than it was a few years ago. According to brewers and distributors, the main reason is higher taxes.

But most persons don't know that there is currently a move on in the state of Missouri to generate new tax funds by taxing soft drinks. It seems as though there are fewer and fewer escape routes from today's rising taxes.

Unlike liquor taxes, which help aid today's squandering government spenders, a tax on soft drinks would be earmarked for only one purpose — conservation.

The proposed taxes on soft drinks was brought out in Saturday's meeting of the Citizens Committee for Conservation in Columbia in an effort to generate an estimated $20 million annually to aid the Missouri Conservation Commission. Currently the commission is funded mainly through the sale of fishing and hunting permits. That avenue brought in around $11 million last year.

The statewide citizens committee Saturday almost unanimously ratified the proposal, which was submitted by finance committee chairman, Al Price of Columbia.

The committee voted to establish a subcommittee to draft an initiative petition to place a tax bill on the ballot in the November, 1972 general election.

A petition of this nature takes the signatures of eight per cent of the number of voters in the last gubernatorial election. Those names must come from at least seven of Missouri's ten congressional districts. The estimated number of minimum signatures is 90,000, but the committee is anticipating a final count in the neighborhood of 150,000 names.

According to reports, the tax would more than likely be one cent per bottle or can of soft drinks. The statement came from the committee's chairman Ted Scott, Buffalo.

He added, however, that revenue studies had been based only partly on states which already tax soft drinks and further study would include conferring with the soft drink industry. At the present time, only seven states list soft drinks as a means of tax revenue source.

In outlining what the "soft drink tax" could be used for, the committee recommended extensive acquisition of wildlife, forestry and recreational lands and development of these lands for use by all the people of Missouri. The committee added that the development of recreational and educational facilities in urban areas and the expanded use, under multiple-use concepts, of existing lands.

Although the petitions, if circulated, may get no farther than the secretary of state's office (as did the Missouri Horse Breeders Association's petition to legalize pari-mutuel betting in Missouri), at least the Citizens Committee for Conservation are showing a deep concern for one of America's (as well as Missouri's) biggest problems.

The key to the whole issue of establishing a tax on soft drinks seems to lie in the fact that the committee has already earmarked the money. This is something that the Governor and the Missouri State Legislature should go to school on in some of their tax proposals.

No Charges Filed In Roberts' Death

KANSAS CITY (AP) — No charges have been filed in the fatal shooting early Tuesday of Larry Roberts, 22, a professional football player who was to have reported to the Cleveland Browns rookie camp July 11.

The prosecutor has turned the case over to the grand jury for investigation.

Roberts died of a bullet wound in the lower chest.

Willie Earl Minis, 33, told authorities Roberts attempted to force his way into the Minis home about 1:30 a.m. Minis said he frightened away two other men who had been with Roberts outside his home.

Rosewall Subdues Richey

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Cliff Richey, big-hearted in defeat, said today he hoped his conqueror, Ken Rosewall of Australia, will win Wimbledon.

"If you want a prediction, I have to lean towards Stan Smith or John Newcombe," the U.S. Davis Cup star from Sarasota, Fla., said. "But for sentimental reasons I hope it will be Kenny."

Rosewall edged Richey 6-8, 5-7, 6-4, 9-7, 7-5 in a four-hour marathon Tuesday and qualified for a semifinals meeting Thursday with Newcombe, the Australian who is bidding for his third Wimbledon crown in five years. Smith, of Pasadena, Calif., has to play Tom Gorman of Seattle, Wash.

Rosewall and Richey got a thunderous standing ovation from the 15,000 fans on the center court after their epic match. Richey—the man who used to have a reputation as a tiger who blew up in defeat—walked off the court with his arm round Rosewall's shoulder.

It was one of Wimbledon's great thrillers. Richey won the first two sets and was 4-2 up in the third when Rosewall started his charge back.

In the final set both players had their chances for a break, and both got out of awkward situations with vintage tennis.

"I feel so much respect for Kenny that I didn't feel too bad about losing," Richey said.

Rosewall planned to relax today, with just a little practice on one of Wimbledon's outer courts.

"I guess I'll be tired, but I'll be all right for the semifinals on Thursday," Rosewall said.

"I'm older than some of the other fellows, so I don't get back trouble."

This was a crack at some of the stars who have been nursing back complaints—Gorman, Newcombe, Rod Laver of Australia and Roger Taylor of England.

Today was semifinals day for the women.

Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., three-time Wimbledon queen and the last American hope, faced 19-year-old Australian Evonne Goolagong and Margaret Court of Australia, the defending champion, was paired against Judy Dalton, another Australian

Vida Blue Fails In Bid To Win No. 17

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

If you don't succeed the first time, try, try again—even against Vida Blue.

That's what the Minnesota Twins and rookie hurler Ray Corbin were forced to do Tuesday night, and this time they succeeded.

Given a third chance against this season's pitching sensation the Twins beat the Oakland A's and Blue 5-3, and all but ruined Blue's chances of winning 20 games before the All Star game.

In other American League games, Detroit beat Baltimore 9-4 in 15 innings in the completion of their Monday night suspended game and then Baltimore walloped the Tigers 15-6 in the regular contest; Boston tripped Washington 6-2; Milwaukee dipped the Chicago White Sox 5-2, the New York Yankees blasted Cleveland 9-2 in the afternoon, and Kansas City nudged California 2-1.

Blue, 16-3, had allowed the Twins only three runs and 12 hits and struck out 22 in beating them twice this season, the second time on national television last Monday when Corbin took the 3-2 loss. But the Twins weren't about to give in, and neither was young Corbin, 5-5.

They spotted the A's Dave Duncan's two-run homer in the second and then came from behind to end Blue's six-game winning streak with his first loss since May 28 and his first ever in the Oakland Coliseum after 10 victories.

And with only time for three more starts Blue, 16-3, won't be winning 20 games by All Star time July 13—unless he works on short rest or relieves.

Detroit won the suspended game with two out in the 15th when Mickey Stanley broke the deadlock with a single, and the Tigers added four more on a bases loaded walk and singles by Norm Cash and Tony Taylor.

Brooks Robinson had capped a four-run ninth inning for Baltimore with a three-run homer with two out that sent the game into extra innings Monday night.

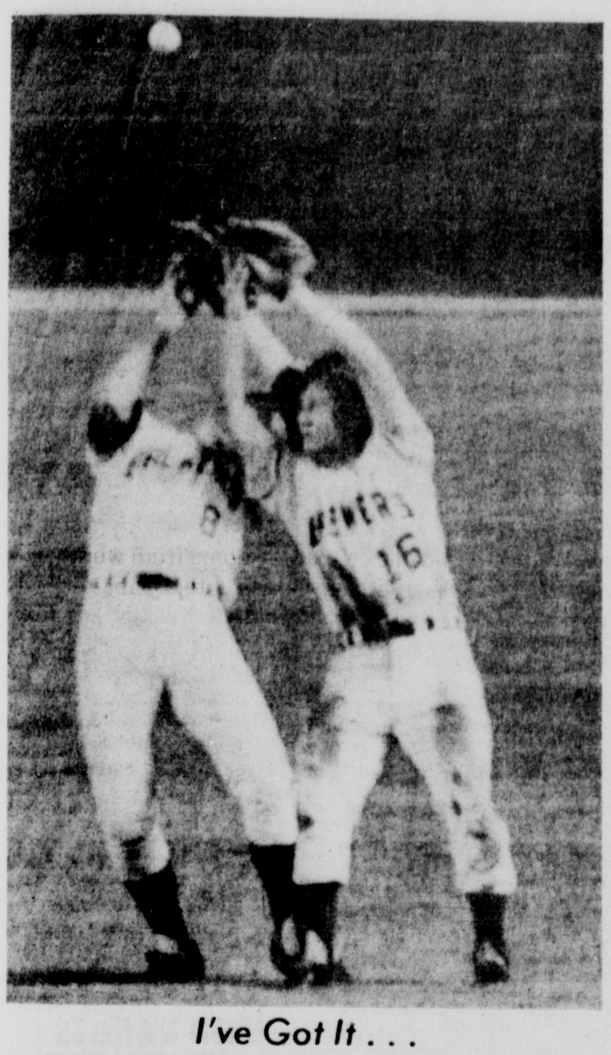
The Orioles did not wait that long in the regular game, and neither did Robinson, who hit another three-run shot in the third after Andy Etchebarren hit one with two on in the second as Baltimore broke a four game losing streak. Jim Northrup drove in four runs with two homers for the Tigers.

The red-hot Red Sox made it five victories in a row as reserves Bob Montgomery and John Kennedy, filling in for injured regulars, each drove in two runs during a five-run second inning off Washington rookie Pete Broberg, 0-2. Kennedy's RBI came on a homer.

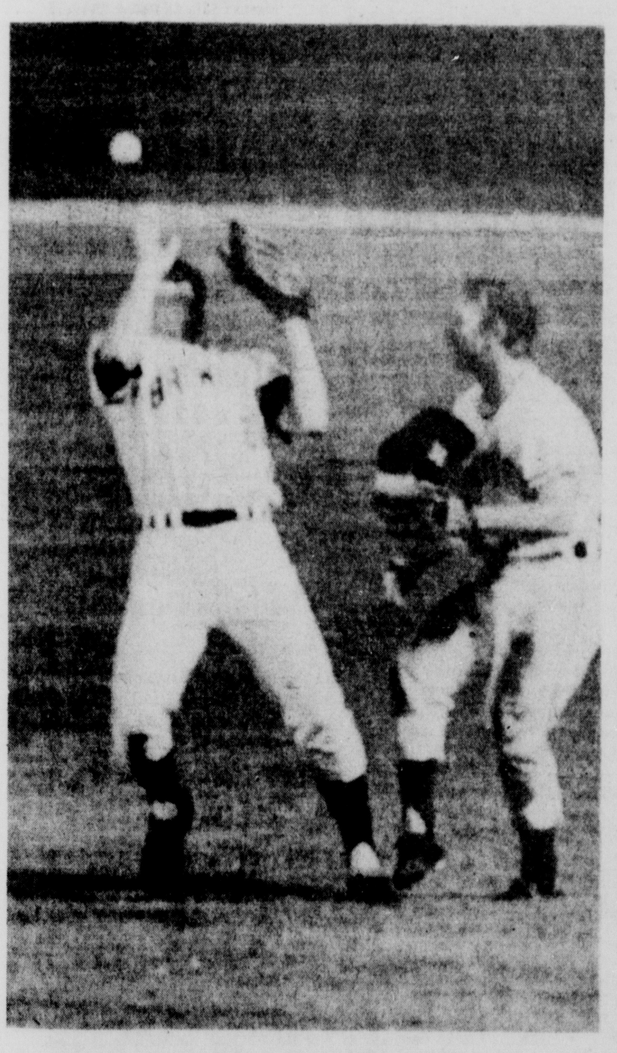
Jim Lonborg, 3-3, got the victory for working into the eighth inning before Sparky Lyle relieved.

Milwaukee, another streaking club, won for the ninth time in 11 starts behind rookie Jim Slaton, 3-1, who scattered eight hits before Ken Sanders got the last out for him. The only Chicago runs off him were homers by Walt Williams and Bill Melton.

The Brewers wrapped up the triumph with four runs in the fourth, two on Andy Kosco's triple.



I've Got It . . .



. . . No, I've Got It

Milwaukee's right fielder Rob Ellis bumps into second baseman Ron Theobald as he waits for a fly ball (top) hit by Chicago White Sox' Jay Johnstone to short right field in the fifth inning of the Brewers-White Sox' game, Tuesday night, in Milwaukee. However, neither player could handle the ball as it pops from Ellis' glove for an error (bottom). Milwaukee dropped the White Sox, 5-2. (UPI)

Johnson Says He Will File For Grievance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The California Angels acted improperly in the indefinite suspension of Alex Johnson and he plans to file a grievance, Marvin Miller, director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, has told a newspaper.

Miller, reached in New York City by the Los Angeles Times, said he expected the grievance to be filed today. The Angels suspended Johnson Saturday, accusing him of lackadaisical play.

Miller said the club in dealing with the situation could have suspended Johnson for 30 days after showing just cause, or could have released him outright.

He indicated that Angel general manager Dick Walsh gave Johnson a letter when he suspended him in which he used wording from league contract rule 21A which deals with gambling and throwing games.

Miller said Walsh may have taken the gambling rule phrase out of contest to allow for the indefinite suspension.

"They're going to have to demonstrate there was a basis under the contract for suspension," Miller said.

He said a meeting would bs held with the Players Association and Owners' Player Relations Committee and if nothing is resolved it may go to outside arbitration.

Seaver Takes Aim

New York Mets' pitcher Tom Seaver takes aim and throws a fast ball to Philadelphia's John Vukovich to strike him out in the eighth inning of Tuesday night's Mets-Phils' game in Philadelphia. Seaver struck out 13 Phillies and went past the 1,000 strikeout mark in his major league career as he hurled a four-hit shutout, 3-0. (UPI)

Tom Seaver KO's 13 Batters in Win

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

It starts deep in the throat, works its way up over the tongue and explodes through the teeth. It is a long, lusty "booooo" and it is the trademark of the Philadelphia fan.

Phillie fans boo so much that there have been times the Liberty Bell and Star Spangled Banner were considered in danger next. But they pulled a switch on Tuesday night and, believe it or not, they cheered.

Oh, it wasn't a Phillie they cheered, of course. It was Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, whose 3-0 13-strikeout shutout included the 1,000th strikeout of his career.

Seaver's four-hitter enabled the Mets to chop one game off Pittsburgh's National League East lead as the Pirates bowed to St. Louis 8-3. Elsewhere in the NL, Cincinnati bombed Montreal 14-0, Chicago nipped Los Angeles 3-2, Atlanta edged Houston 5-4 and San Francisco downed San Diego 6-4.

When Seaver fanned Willie Montanez leading off the seventh inning for his 1,000th career strikeout, the scoreboard flashed the news to fans in Veteran's Stadium. The crowd of 22,017 gave Seaver a standing ovation that the right-hander admitted was "a bit of a surprise."

Seaver responded by fanning the next two batters as well as two more in the eighth, running his career total to 1,004.

Cincinnati looked more like the Big Red Machine, unloading a 23-hit attack to wallop Montreal. Tommy Helms led the Reds' attack with four hits. Buddy Bradford and Pete Rose each homered with Bradford driving in four runs and Johnny Bench delivering three.

Ron Santo drove in two runs including Chicago's game-winner with an eighth inning sacrifice fly that beat Los Angeles.

The Dodgers had just tied the game with a run in the eighth when Paul Popovich and Billy Williams opened the bottom half of the inning with consecutive singles, bringing up Santo, who was hitless for the day.

"I was struggling all day," said Santo, "but I was determined to get a good piece of the ball for at least a long fly."

Zoilo Versailles doubled home two runs, capping a three-run first inning and then Oscar Brown singled two more home in the fifth as Atlanta got by Houston.

Hamm's Beer Loses Two To O'Connors

HOUSTONIA — Mike O'Connor Motors took a pair of softball games from Hamm's Beer here Monday night, 6-0 and 6-4, to stretch their record to 31-3 for the season.

John Fiene was the winning pitcher in the opener for Oc'Connors, with Willis Charles being charged with the loss.

Bill Ray, star shortstop for O'Connors, blasted a two-run home run in the top of the seventh to lead O'Connors to a 6-0 shutout win in the nightcap. Ed Dress hurled the shutout; Bob Fischer took the loss for Hamm's.

Frank Dow sparked Hamm's in the losing efforts going six-for-eight in both games.

McPike Steals Show

Second baseman Roger McPike turned into "Mr. Do It All" for Third National Bank Tuesday night at Third National captured an 11-4 win over V.F.W. on the strength of McPike's bat in Senior Babe Ruth League action.

In Tuesday night's other contest, S-M Sporting Goods stretched their mark to 9-1 for the season as they slipped past Pepsi-Cola, 3-2.

McPike nearly single-handedly took over the offensive show for Third National in their win over V.F.W. McPike cracked out the season's first homer in the league over the centerfield fence to drive in a pair of runs. McPike had two other rbi's in the game on a double and a triple as he turned in a perfect night at the plate going three-for-three. McPike scored two runs as well in the game to account for six of Third National's 11 tallies.

Jim Lewis picked up the victory to run his pitching record to 4-2 for the season; Mike Arnold, now 2-5, was tagged with the loss.

Steve Herzberg, who got the starting call for mount duty for S-M, and reliever Bob Pledge combined for 14 strike outs against Pepsi-Cola in S-M's 32-victory. Pledge was the winning pitcher.

Don Vinson scored what proved to be the winning run for S-M in the fourth inning as he reached first on an error, advanced to second on a walk and went to third to set up the score on an error by the catcher.

Vinson came home on a single by Steve Holmes to give S-M a 3-1 lead at that point in the contest.

Pepsi could cross the plate only one more time in the game as S-M posted their ninth win outings for the season and retained first place in the standings.

Dennis McFarland, who was the losing pitcher for Pepsi-Cola, saw his pitching record fall to 0-2 for the season.

Big Weekend Set At Capital Track

HOLTS SUMMIT — A big weekend of racing is on tap for Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights at Capital Speedway, here.

For Saturday night, promoters have added a fifth event to the weekly super-sprint, late model stock car program — midget racers.

Sunday evening, Capital Speedway will host a demolition derby and a big fireworks display.

Monday night, motorcycle racing will be presented at the three-eighths mile oval.

United States Gets Early Regatta Win

HENLEY-on-THAMES, England (AP) — Jack Dietz of the New York Athletic Club got the United States off to a good start at Henley Royal Regatta today with an easy victory over Scotland's Jerry McCarthy in the first round of the Diamond Challenge sculls.

Dietz moved straight into the lead at the start of the mile, 550-yard course and was always the master in this heat of the regatta's main individual event.

His time was 8:37 and the official distance was "easily," a term used at the regatta to indicate more than five lengths.

In the first round of the Ladies Challenge Plate for eights—a men's event despite its name—Orange Coast College from Newport Harbor, Calif., lost by a length to England's Fitzwilliam went clear in 7:14.

The Ladies Challenge Plate is the second rate prize for eights at the Regatta behind the Grand Challenge Cup.

Spuyten Duyvil Rowing Club of New York had a dreadful start in the first round of the Wyfold Challenge Cup for coxless fours. They were five lengths down after half a mile against England's Thames Rowing Club but pulled back three lengths by the mile post.

They never got any nearer and were four-length losers in 8:19.

The regatta opened in brilliant sunshine but a stiff breeze was making things difficult for the crews and for the thousands of spectators lining the river banks and the exclusive enclosures.

Education Voucher Plan Boosted By Court Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court disapproval of some forms of state aid to parochial schools has given a boost to a congressional proposal for issuing educational vouchers to each U.S. family.

Under the plan, strongly opposed by many public school officials parents could use the voucher to send their children to any school they choose.

The Office of Economic Opportunity is conducting a limited experiment with the voucher system in several school districts, but it has never been considered by Congress.

Now, Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., chairman of the House general education subcommittee, says he will try to provide for a voucher plan in a general school aid bill on which he is working.

A Roman Catholic with a large Catholic constituency in his Chicago district, Pucinski said Tuesday he was bitterly disappointed by the Supreme Court decision that held unconstitutional any teacher supplements or "excessive entanglements" between government and church schools in Rhode Island and Pennsylvania.

In the last three years more than 1,000 parochial schools have been closed and the entire system is threatened by lack of funds, Pucinski said.

If the parochial schools are forced to shut down and the 4.3 million pupils attending them are placed in the public schools, he said, the public school system will be in danger of bankruptcy.

Pucinski has drafted a bill to provide a family with a $100 voucher for each school-age child, which could be cashed in at either a public or private school.

Supporters of the voucher plan say it would invigorate education by introducing competition into the system, but its opponents say it would drain money, pupils and teachers from the public school system and eventually undermine it.

Pucinski is planning to try to attach his voucher proposal to a bill that also calls for greatly increased federal support for the public schools.

Although voucher plans funded by the OEO are in various stages of planning in Seattle, Wash., San Jose, Calif., Rockland, Maine, and San Francisco, the OEO has not endorsed the idea but says it wants to find out whether it will work.

Police Seeking Motive

NEW YORK (AP) — Police say they are still seeking a motive for the shooting of reputed Mafia leader Joseph A. Colombo Sr. and are "open to all theories."

Colombo, 48, remained in a coma and in critical condition today after being gunned down Monday as he was preparing to lead a big outdoor Italian-American civil rights rally.

Surgeons said late Tuesday that his vital signs were somewhat stronger but estimated his chances of survival were 50-50. They said brain damage was likely if he recovers.

Racism and gangland rivalry have figured in speculation on the motive for the shooting. But Chief of Detectives Albert Seedman said Tuesday the gunman may have decided to shoot Colombo on his own.

Detectives were still trying to learn more about Jerome A. Johnson, the 24-year-old black man who fired three shots into Colombo before being shot to death moments later. They also were seeking a woman seen with Johnson before the shooting.

Undercover detectives in Harlem and Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant section were trying to learn if Johnson had any links with black mobs reportedly set up by Joseph Gallo, reputed mob leader said to have been feuding with Colombo over underworld territory.

Meanwhile, dozens of underworld informants giving federal law enforcement officials information about the Mafia's reaction to the shooting were said to express the opinion that Johnson's behavior at the shooting was highly professional and that he might have been hired and coached.

Seedman said a call made to The Associated Press after the shootings by a group identified as the Black Revolutionary Attack Force claiming to have initiated the shooting was probably a crank call.

The Italian American Civil Rights League, which Colombo founded and which sponsored Monday's rally, told its 32 chapters in the metropolitan area the shooting of Colombo was the work of "one nut, one fanatic" and "the black community should not be held responsible."

Probing Missouri Shooting

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — An investigator for the statewide council of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) spent seven hours Tuesday discussing the June 9 Dunlap shooting with city and county officials.

The Rev. W. H. Hickman, president of the local branch of the NAACP, would not identify the investigator. He said the man met with Greene County Prosecuting Attorney Dee Wampler and police officials.

Michael Dunlap, 21, was shot to death after a scuffle with a policeman in a drug store.

A coroner's jury fixed no blame in the shooting and Wampler later said he did not plan to file any charges in the death of the young black.

The Rev. Mr. Hickman announced Monday the NAACP planned to see that the case was investigated in more detail.

A spokesman for the council investigator said only that he will review his findings and submit a report at a later date.

Power of Union's Leaders Criticized

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "Union leaders have financial power and they use it unmercifully and illegally," an official with the Missourians Right to Work said Monday night.

"They've hoodwinked politicans into believing they represent the work force," Gene Mittelberg told a meeting of the Kansas City Conservative Club.

Mittelberg said prospects are good that Missouri legislators will pass a law to prohibit employers and unions from entering into contracts that require employes to be union members. He said it may come up in the legislature's next session.

Mittelberg is executive vice president of Missourians Right to Work, which is based at Columbia.

The Sedalia Scottish Rite Club will hold their regular business meeting at the Masonic Temple at 7:30 p.m. on Thurs. July 1. All Scottish Rite Masons are urged to attend.

Americans love to eat

"Take it from me, Len Dawson, judging by the amount of Seitz Cold Cuts they've been buying, Americans are hearty eaters.

Why? With over 30 different varieties to choose from, Seitz has a cold cut for every occasion, all of them in the new "see-thru" vacuum-sealed package. You can see there are no half or broken slices.

But, the best part is what's in the package. Seitz meats are U.S.D.A. inspected with time and patience put into each product.

Seitz Macaroni and Cheese Loaf, for example, is made from wholesome pork and beef and a generous amount of real macaroni and Wisconsin Cheddar cheese. Seitz Pickle Loaf is made with chopped sweet pickles and sweet red peppers from California. And Seitz Kansas City Round really is the best Bologna in town with, would you believe, 8 varieties to choose from including Garlic, Onion and German Style.

Those are just a few of the things that make Seitz 30 different varieties of cold cuts the choice of so many people, including the Dawsons.

No wonder Americans love to eat, and so many choose Seitz. Seitz All American Meats."

Innovative High Schools Have Pumped New Interest into Education

By LYNN SHERR
Associated Press Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The Banjo Incident happened in second period class, while the teacher was talking to about 20 kids sprawled around the room.

Suddenly, a blond boy in blue jeans who'd been strumming on his banjo started playing so loud no one could hear the teacher.

"I can't concentrate," complained one girl. All eyes fastened on the teacher. He wore blue jeans, too, and sat cross-legged on the floor with the kids.

"Hmm. We have a conflict," he said simply. The music continued. A dozen bodies shifted uneasily.

Then the girl who couldn't concentrate shouted at the banjoist, "Hey, cut it out!" The music level dropped. The teacher went on talking. I was bewildered.

My experience in public high school had been strictly traditional: being a good student meant getting straight As and wearing matching skirts and sweaters to school and having the teacher stand at the front of the room with a pointer.

I'd even liked it.

But what about these new experimental high schools where blackboards were brown and chalk was yellow, and where maybe there wasn't any right answer? How would you know what to do if there weren't any rules?

What way do they point for the future of U.S. secondary education?

There aren't very many innovative high schools in America today. Most advocates of school reform generally end their "recommended" lists after the Parkway Program in Philadelphia; John Adams High in Portland, Ore., and the Murray Road School in Newton, Mass. These are branded "innovative" because students are given more flexibility and individual choice.

But there are more recent attempts at alternative public education. The High School of Metropolitan Studies (Metro) in Chicago opened in February 1970 and is, like Philadelphia's Parkway, a "school without walls," utilizing the entire city as its classroom, with courses taught eyerywhere from the aquarium to corporate offices.

In Berkeley, there are options to the options. Six experimental schools—Community High, Community Two, East Campus, Black House, Model School A and Other Ways—coexist as varied alternatives, or subschools, to the single "regular" Berkeley High.

School Superintendent Richard Foster calls it his "umbrella" theory of education.

"I no longer see a school system as a series of schools, but as an umbrella with a number of alternatives," he says. "And if one school doesn't suit you, create another."

★ ★ ★

By and large, Metro and the six Berkeley schools share some of the basic tenets of all innovative schools: flexibility in scheduling, close teacher-student contact, smaller classes, longer periods, no "tracking," no school bells, little competition, less pressure, few requirements, decentralization of authority and, above all, a sense that students are people.

It can be jarring if you're used to the traditional approach. Take Community High, a 3-year-old, 300-student school which is physically situated in five classrooms on its own corridor in the regular Berkeley High. These rooms are haphazardly carpeted, cushioned and decorated with everybody's mothers' leftover attic furniture. Kids in denim overalls lounged on overstuffed chairs and piles of mattresses, wandered in and out of rooms, nibbled at homemade whole wheat bread. Actually, it was pretty sloppy—a fact that led one U.S. Office of Education official to comment, "Why does freedom have to be equated with dirt?"

Upstairs, in the corridor designed for Community Two—a smaller—100 pupils—and newer—winter 1971—and slightly more structured version of Community High—I found a Second Jarring Principle of experimental schools: students call teachers by their first names.

Sometimes, they even act like teachers. Thus, one day at noon, Bruce Klickstein, an intense 11th-grader at Community High, traced a graceful arc in the air with his arm as he instructed two sophomore girls in T'ai Chi Chuan, the Chinese martial art. The girls would get gym credit.

State requirements are met in ingenious ways. John Babelaar, 29, a tall and physically fit teacher at Community High, said, "Physical Education has become the most fascist of all departments in most high schools. P. E. teachers seem to feel there's one absolute standard for physical fitness for everyone."

Babelaar offers his students the chance to fulfill P. E. hours in such forms as yoga, survival hiking, Aikedo (Japanese equivalent of Tai Chi) or "the furthest-out option—just walking to school."

But did anyone know the basics?

"No student is gonna get out of here without knowing how to read," insisted Buddy Jackson, the youthful director of Black House, a controversial alternative for 75 black students located in an off-campus YMCA Service Center in Berkeley.

★ ★ ★

Basics are not omitted at the other schools, either, although they are frequently couched behind unusual titles. Metro's "Gizmo Reading" is really another remedial reading course. East Campus offers "Individual Instruction in Reading" and "English Skills." Community High includes Chemistry II and Physics II along with Survival Crafts, which teaches such basic things as soap-making.

Where Black House and many other schools really shine, however, is where they offer courses outside the regular curriculum and, more significantly, outside the regular school. Black House students spend one-third of their time in the community. They have visited Soledad State Prison, have set up a cooperative grocery store and have delivered food and clothing to Hines County, Miss.

At Community High, Ann Witt, a junior, spent a month learning a new trade with a 45-year-old plumber, most of whose jobs were in the Oakland ghetto.

Herb Kohl, director of the off-campus Other Ways, explained, "I no longer believe that the classroom is the unit of learning. The whole idea that kids are in a classroom automatically sets up a situation where you've got one adult and lots of kids who can't move around."

Other Ways offers many out-of-the-classroom possibilities to its 90 students: work in a sandal shop, study with a jazz musician; urban survival. This spring, five boys built a boat in someone's garage—for credit.

Metro High in Chicago takes the step beyond Other Ways. Almost all of its classes are offered outside the school building—largely in the plush offices of city-based corporations. Thus, you can study theory of TV in the Western Electric offices, ecology at Adler Planetarium, marine biology at the Chicago Aquarium.

Chicago's Metro was the brainchild of the Urban Research Corporation, a private company that wanted to give students "control over their own learning," and to see that "the resources of the entire city, including its businesses, its cultural institutions, and its community organizations," became "a laboratory for learning."

Today, Metro serves some 325 students—more than half of whom are black—ranging from those with a third-grade reading level to a National Merit Scholarship finalist.

Principal Nate Blackman, so conspicuous in his three-piece suit among the casually dressed students that the kids gave him a soda pop celebration when he left off the tie a few months ago, says, "We are teaching students how to think and be responsible. We are not developing skills, but how to deal with society."

In Berkeley, the reasons and aims are diverse.

"There's no one style. Everyone does things differently," says Herb Kohl about the teaching methods at Other Ways. "It's that lack of difference in public schools that's devastating. You know exactly what to expect."

Not surprisingly, Other Ways has been unpredictable since it began in a storefront three years ago. Today, Kohl calls it "an extended family. These kids are sane revolutionaries."

★ ★ ★

Gary Hall, 16, a sensitive black poet-student there who rarely attended class elsewhere, recalled his first visit. He said he stopped by the storefront one afternoon, took one look at the colorful pictures, beer cans on the floor, radios blaring, people talking with each other and said, "It was like a shock. I never experienced nothing like that before. I said, 'Is this a school?'"

He continued: "A teacher used to be someone with a whip in one hand and a textbook in the other. Now he's a person. Teachers in Other Ways care about you."

Black House was another offshoot of Community High, but for different reasons. One official at the school district said that Buddy Jackson, then teaching at Community High, pulled out "because he found out that black kids were not finding out about themselves from Free Angela collages."

Jackson himself says, "We're here because we need to be together. I thought there was a lack of direction for black students. We want to show black kids that they can do some things for themselves."

Whatever the format, it isn't easy to start—or sustain—an alternative public high school. More than one school director admitted that academics—what the kids are learning—pose huge problems. Most offer regularly scheduled courses on how to prepare for college entrance examinations to compensate for their unorthodox programs.

The freedom of the schools sets up another problem. It frequently goes unappreciated. "So many of these kids come out of lock-step elementary schools, we have to convince them to use their freedom," said Lee Alo, assistant principal at Metro. "They've never had this experience."

But as the students found out, that isn't easy either. Bruce Goren, a Metro sophomore, helped start a class that met at someone's aunt's place next to Gino's Pizza Parlor in downtown Chicago. At the time, it was the only space available. "I used to go home last year and I kept telling my mother and father, 'It sure must have been hard to start this country.'"

To some extent, the schools themselves have fought revolutionary battles with their respective boards. All complain about the petty, logistical hassles: sending in daily attendance forms, getting requisitioned lockers, etc.

More serious is the problem of finances. The Berkeley schools have mostly been dependent on the lion's share of a $250,000 grant from the Ford Foundation to the entire Berkeley school district.

Metro's money comes from its board and from private businesses. None of these sources is forever, though. And administrators seem to constantly wonder, where will the next grant come from? Getting funds often means answering the questions of achievement. Who are the alternative schools serving? And are they serving them adequately?

"It's an axiom that experimental programs meet the needs of the white middle class," admitted Nate Blackman. "They are not responsive to black students."

Teaching at alternative schools takes its toll, too. Carl Brice, an English teacher at Community High, said, "It's a lot more demanding. You can't hide behind any kind of rules for long."

From the other side of the corridor, the criticisms are even stronger. Clifford Wong, principal of the regular Berkeley High, said the alternative schools are problematic because they are located within his physical territory.

"I have problems explaining to students in one area why rules don't apply to all groups," he said, citing a case of card playing being outlawed in his school and allowed in Community High. "Also, one of our fears is, if you make many alternative schools, the main school will be a residual kind of thing. We'll have only the leftovers."

William Kennedy, chairman of Berkeley High's English Department, firmly opposes the schools-within-the-school. "Far too many people fail to accept the notion that not every youngster can operate with so much freedom. The bulk need some kind of inner structure . . . We need less of this 'instant curriculum' where you decide on Monday morning, this is the course."

Despite the criticisms, however, the alternative schools seem there to stay—and with government approval. Recently, the entire Berkeley school system was selected by the U.S. Office of Education to share a $12-million grant with school systems in Minneapolis and in suburban Tacoma, Wash. The money, awarded by the Experimental Schools program, covers a 30-month period and resulted from a stiff competition which began with over 500 letters of application.

"Berkeley was what we considered to be exciting potential for lots of youngsters," explained Tom Israel, an assistant in the Experimental Schools program. He also emphasized that for the most part, the schools were too young to evaluate fully now.

Dr. Sidney P. Marland, Jr., U.S. Commissioner of Education, in a speech last April cited the winners of the Experimental Schools grants as examples of comprehensive change. These schools, he said, "will help us prove or disprove a theory which says that if you try to change a whole system, from kindergarten through Grade 12, all at the same time, working with perhaps 2,000-5,000 children, then you may be able to achieve some kind of change and some permanent reform."

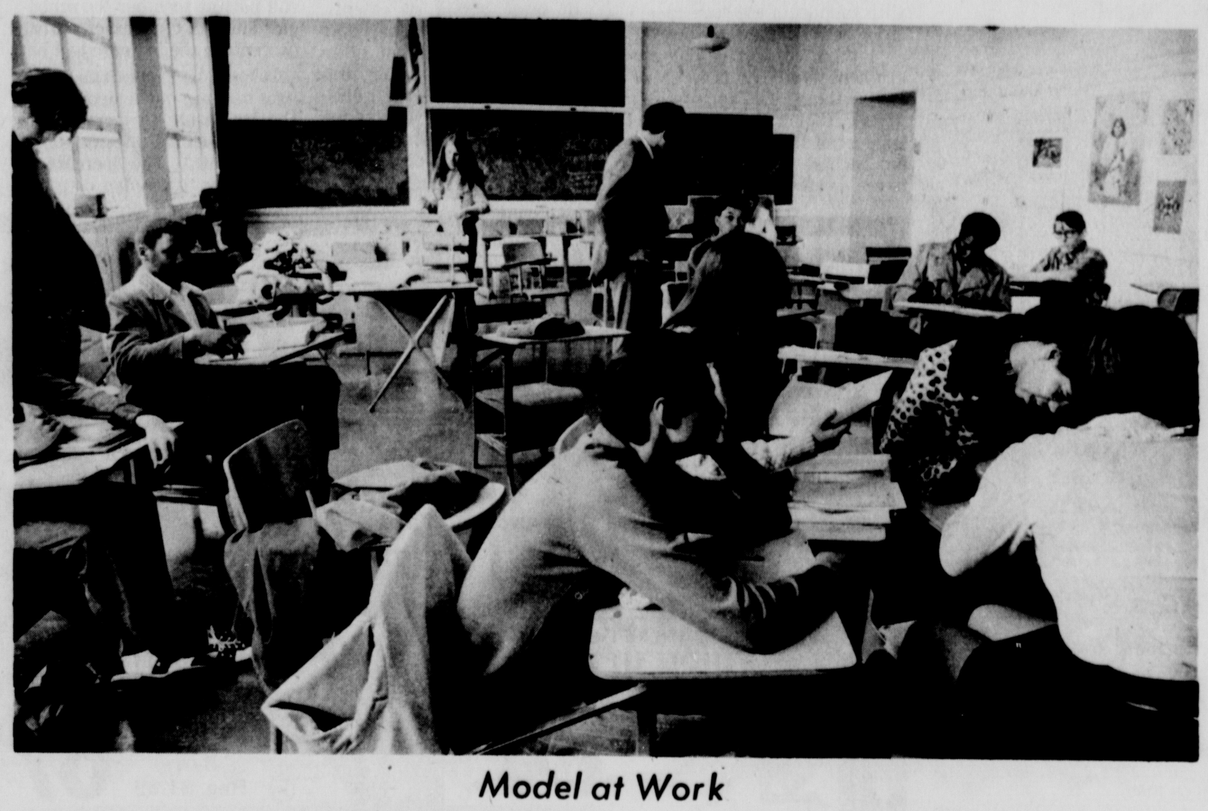
Education Critic Mario D. Fantini, dean of education at the State University of New York at New Paltz, suggested that Berkeley indicated a trend of the future.

"I think that in many ways, Berkeley is unfolding what the new type of reform will look like in the 70s and beyond: alternatives within the framework of public education," Dean Fantini said.

"Berkeley is the first citywide approach to the problem."

As for the content of the learning programs, Dean Fantini explained that "they are individualizing learning. Not in the old way, by saying, 'We have progressive instruction and TV sets and teaching machines,' but they are changing total environments. What's important to the student is the context in which he participates. That is the curriculum."

Dean Fantini, who was program officer at the Ford Foundation before his current post, explained that the new Berkeley schools were "built around individual freedom. The competition is competition with yourself, not with others. It's up to you. The movement will be towards more of an intrinsic reward system in all schools, so that the person is self-motivated."



Model at Work

Jeff Tudisco, center, director of Model School A, visits a class where he insists the students call him "Mr." — "That's my hangup," he says. Model School A provides a more structured approach to innovative education while still offering courses such as apartment living and language arts. (AP)

Church 'Conspiracy' Stirs Controversy

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — On the evening of Jan. 12, Lawrence Cardinal Shehan went to the Baltimore city jail to visit three men he had ordained as priests.

They had been arrested on federal charges of bombing and kidnap conspiracy.

The pastoral visit by the aging Roman Catholic prelate was the start of a long controversy within his archdiocese over the role of the church in social issues.

"We believe that the business of the Catholic church is to make simple men aware of their simple state and to lead them to a penitent form," says George R. Wildt Sr., 37, a leader of the lay group called Catholics Concerned and among the cardinal's chief critics.

der fire after his visit for continuing to support the three accused men, Rev. Neil R. McLaughlin, 30, Rev. Joseph R. Wenderoth, 35, and former priest Anthony Scoblick, 30.

Indictments returned in Harrisburg, Pa., charged the three Baltimore men and three others with comspiring to blow up heating tunnels in Washington and abduct presidential adviser Henry Kissinger. Rev. Philip Berrigan, 47, the purported mastermind of the plot, already is serving a federal prison term for pouring blood on draft files. Other defendants are Sister Elizabeth McAlister of Marymount College in Tarrytown, N.Y., and Eqbal Ahmad of the Adlai Stevenson Institute at the University of Chicago.

A later indictment which superseded the January charges also named as defendants Scoblick's 32-year-old wife, Mary, a former nun, and John T. Glick, 21, now in prison for taking part in a raid on a federal building in Rochester, N.Y.

At the arraignment of the Baltimore men in January, Cardinal Shehan interceded to gain the release of Scoblick and the two priests on reduced bond and in his custody.

Bail was raised largely by the Roman Catholic clergy in Baltimore.

Two weeks after the indictments, the cardinal gave Fathers Wenderoth and McLaughlin their first parish assignments since removing them from their posts a year earlier for admittedly tampering with draft files.

Complications arose when Catholics Concerned issued public statements to the effect that the activist clergy were aiding Communist subversion.

Francis X. Gallagher, the archdiocese counsel and unpaid lawyer for the Baltimore defendants, feels opposition from some lay quarters has theological roots.

"They don't like to see priests and nuns in this particular kind of trouble," Gallagher said, "because anti-government activity is not only poor patriotism, it's poor Catholic religion."

This is so, he added, because Catholicism "is a religion which by and large is identified with support of the government come hell or high water."

"I think support of the government these days is a very selective thing," Gallagher said.

To Catholics Concerned, it is support of the archdiocese that has become selective. Members have picketed local churches and asked parishioners to withhold Sunday contributions.

However, only one church reported a problem with declining collections and said it was only temporary. Most churchmen claim public reaction has supported the cardinal by better than a 4-1 margin.

In brief public statements, Cardinal Shehan will say only that "clergymen do not relinquish their rights as citizens when they embrace the ministry. Indeed, they have a unique obligation to emphasize the moral implications of both foreign and domestic policy."

Among The Accused

Iowans To Note Paycheck Pinch

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Iowans will be feeling a pinch in their paychecks soon as a state tax increase approved by the 1971 legislature goes into effect.

State Revenue Director Donald Briggs said Monday his department will be mailing withholding schedules to employers this week, ordering them to increase state income tax withholding rates.

Briggs said the department is still putting together the schedules and can't say exactly what percentage the increase will be.

It could be as much as 66 per cent because of the decision by the legislature to increase the state's personal income taxes by one-third. The increase is retroactive to last Jan. 1.

Briggs made the decision to order the withholding boost after meeting with Gov. Robert Ray who wanted the increase implemented as soon as possible.

"The sooner the better," the governor said, "so people pay a little at a time."

Renoir Stolen

LONDON (AP) — Two men stole a 9-by-13-inch Renoir priced at $24,000 from an art gallery in the West End. Police said the men told a clerk Monday they wanted to look around the gallery, then cut the little oil painting titled "Green Landscape" from its frame when they were left alone for a few minutes.

Man Reinstated As Postmaster

GREAT BEND, Kan. (AP)— Joseph W. Henkle Sr., former Kansas lieutenant governor, has been reinstated as Great Bend's postmaster.

Henkle was relieved of his duties on May 28, 1970. He was reinstated after being cleared of charges by the Civil Service Appeals Board in Washington.

Henkle was charged with six counts of unethical conduct, and a civil service examiner found him guilty of two of the six charges. His reinstatement provides that he be paid for 13 months when he was relieved of his duties.

Henkle was named acting postmaster on March 13, 1965, and was appointed permanent postmaster 18 months later.

New Rug Costs $30,000

New White House Rug

Refurbishing in the Diplomatic Reception Room includes this new $30,000 wool rug, 18th century urns mounted as lamps and a rare mahogany cane settee presented to Mrs. Richard Nixon by the National Society of Interior Designers. (AP)

AP Newsfeatures Writer

When it comes to housekeeping, the White House has a lot in common with the average American home. Its rooms must be refurbished from time to time, and new furnishings and colors added must be chosen to harmonize with existing things.

Newest room to get a decorating renewal is the Diplomatic Reception Room. It is part of a long range goal begun in 1960 by the National Society of Interior Designers who just presented to a beaming Mrs. Nixon a new $30,000 wool rug, a pair of 18th Century Chinese export urns mounted as lamps ($4,500) and a pair of rare mahogany (circa 1795) cane-seat settees with reeded and carved arms and arm supports ending in reeded legs, which was found by the curator of the White House. The society supplied $9,500 for their purchase.

Indians, trees, horses, pioneers, women and even a bear are some of the impressionistic symbols of the 50 states bordering the rug (23 feet 8 inches by 33 feet 10 inches) which was designed by the society and Edward Fields, who donated the rug. It has been estimated that more than 20 million people had walked on a rug, also designed by Fields, that had been on the floor 10 years.

"In planning the rug this time, we took the colors from the wallpaper," Fields explained. "The first rug was put down before the wallpaper was found, and the colors were stronger. This time we took the colors, five shades of blue, four shades of gold and three shades of orange gold from the paper. Now the rug doesn't compete with it. It harmonizes. The new rug also has a center medallion that compliments the architectural motif in the ceiling."

At the acceptance, Mrs. Nixon complimented Mr. Fields on the beauty of the rug.

It was during President Kennedy's term of office that the Zuber scenic antique wallpaper, an original hand blocked print, was acquired by the society at a cost of $17,500.

In President Eisenhower's time the society had done the room with new settees, upholstery and furnishings in the period of the original construction of the White House. The design group also recovered some of this furniture in new gold silk fabric designed by Scalamandre.

Reaction Is Mixed To Ruling

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Supreme Court decision, which bars state aid to parochial schools but approves federal aid to help construct buildings at church-related colleges, drew mixed reactions from opposing forces in Kansas City.

The vice president of the school board for the Kansas City-St. Joseph Roman Catholic diocese, John McDonough said, Monday the only way to fight the court's decision was to "go out and vote down all school bond issues — beat them at the polls."

Dr. Hugh Wamble, chairman of Missourians Against Parochial Aid and an instructor at Midwestern Baptist Seminary in Kansas City, said: "I can only rejoice." Wamble has been debating the issue before Missouri legislators for years. He said he still feels Missourians do not want "to be taxed to finance church-related education — directly or indirectly."

McDonough countered that he feels it is time "for the public school families to pay for their own children instead of riding the backs of private school families and families without children."

The ground around Point Barrow, Alaska, is frozen to a depth of 1,330 feet. At Thule, Greenland, the freezing extends for 1,000 feet. The deepest permafrost yet measured—2,850 feet—is in Eastern Siberia.

Curb Is Sought on Explosive Growth of Brazilian Metropolis

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Without warning, a trim, balding man wearing a sports shirt appears at a subway construction site. He converses briefly with engineers, makes a few notes and leaves. Minutes later he's at City Hall, presiding over a conference on flood control. Then he rushes off to the Sanitation Dept. to taste the rice and beans the streetcleaners are getting for lunch.

This is Jose Carlos de Figueiredo Ferraz, university professor, former track star and now mayor of South America's biggest city. Sympathetic friends say Figueiredo Ferraz has inherited South America's biggest problem.

"Sao Paulo must stop growing, or else it will turn into chaos," the 52-year-old mayor told a visitor. "Our population is increasing by more than 200,000 a year. We no longer have the resources to supply the people with basic services: housing, electricity, sanitation, transportation, water," he said. "Today, people don't 'live' in this city. They're punished by it."

Known to the rest of Brazil as "The city that can't stop," Sao Paulo has become an urban planner's nightmare. It has more than 6 million people within the city limits and is No. 2 in population in the Western Hemisphere. All indications are that it will overtake New York by 1980.

Sao Paulo is bigger in area than Los Angeles (576 sq. mi. versus 458), and its metropolitan area, with a population of more than 8 million, has nearly twice as many manufacturing plants (27,500) as greater Chicago.

The city has grown so fast government agencies have been hopelessly left behind in their efforts to keep pace. Downtown traffic is a massive snarl. The air is polluted. Millions of "Paulistas" lack telephones, paved and lighted streets, sewers and piped-in water. Neighborhood parks, schools and hospitals are luxuries for a privileged minority.

Why would anybody want to be the mayor?

"I was won over after some hard persuasion," explained Figueiredo Ferraz. "I'm not a politician. I think that by applying modern administrative methods, including computerized data processing, we can begin to work out logical solutions to our problems."

Married and the father of four children, Figueiredo Ferraz holds a Ph.D. in physical science and mathematics and another in architecture. He was South American 100-meter champion in the late 1930s. He doesn't smoke, prefers lemonade to whisky and—despite his gruelling schedule as mayor—still has a college class where he lectures twice a month on "Bridges and Large Structures."

The local press has given big play to the way Figueiredo Ferraz pops up unexpectedly at construction projects and municipal offices.

"You've got to get out and be seen," he remarked. "If the mayor stays in his office and never personally inspects what's going on, this job becomes fiction."

Figueiredo Ferraz' current priority project is the subway. "It's the only solution to our traffic problem," he said, "and it's the only major municipal undertaking for which we currently have the needed resources at our disposal."

Sao Paulo's 41.5-mile subway will be the most expensive public works project in the history of Brazil, with an expected price tag of well over $1 billion. Construction began in 1968 but until recently had limped along. The mayor publicly has promised that a 5-mile stretch from downtown to the north side will be operating by October, 1973.

Also high on his list: creating a "green heart" amid Sao Paulo's central core of steel, concrete and traffic exhaust. The mayor realizes this will be long in coming and costly, so for the present he relies on laws such as the one which prohibits anyone from cutting down a tree without permission from the city.

Figueiredo Ferraz is pushing for administrative reforms such as bringing traffic control and water supply under city instead of state jurisdiction. But he recognizes that the over-all solution for making Sao Paulo stop is out of his control.

"We must do something to slow down the movement from the countryside to the cities, not just here but all over Brazil," he said. "We must make it practical for people to remain in rural areas. We need more highways, rural electrification, regional agricultural and technical schools."

A $3 million study contracted by the city three years ago predicted Sao Paulo's population in 1990 would be 10 to 13 million and as high as 20 million including the suburbs.

"The city simply must come to a halt—now," Figueiredo Ferraz says.

Disappointed by the Supreme Court's decision striking down two plans for state aid to parochial schools, Roman Catholic leaders are seeking to preserve other plans and looking for new methods of obtaining such aid.

The parochial school system is "now mortally threatened," John Cardinal Krol, Archbishop of Philadelphia, said Monday, but "as ever before, we remain staunchly committed to keeping the doors of our schools open."

"The serious impact of this decision on nonpublic schools cannot be overestimated," declared Bishop Joseph L. Bernardin, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference in Washington.

"But while the decision complicates the financial problems of nonpublic education," he added, "it does not mean the end of nonpublic schools in the United States."

The court has not "shut all doors," the bishop said in suggesting that other methods of providing state aid to parochial schools would have to be found.

The court ruled plans in use in Pennsylvania and Rhode Island were unconstitutional. Their programs of awarding state aid to help pay teachers of secular subjects in church schools "entangle" the state with religion, the court decided.

Financially hard-pressed, the Catholic school system has 4.6 million pupils in 11,683 elementary and secondary schools. Enrollment has declined by a million pupils with the closing of 1,400 schools since 1965.

An important element in the financial squeeze has been the shortage of teaching nuns and the subsequent need to pay higher slaries to lay teachers.

New York's new $33 million aid program is a question mark in the wake of the ruling because it resembles the Pennsylvania plan. It provides funds to nonpublic schools on a per-pupil basis for "secular educational services."

Msgr. Joseph O'Keefe, secretary to Terence Cardinal Cooke, Archbishop of New York, said he felt the decision would not "necessarily affect" the New York plan.

But Burt Neuborne, a lawyer for the New York Civil Liberties Union, said, "It seems to me the entire approach of the New York legislature has been knocked out."

Leo Pfeffer, who argued against the Rhode Island law in the Supreme Court, said the American Jewish Committee and the Committee for Public Education and Religious Liberty are planning to challenge the New York program in the courts.

"We've got a lot of homework to do," said the Rev. Albert J. Koob, president of the National Catholic Education Association in Washington. "This is not the end of Catholic education. It tells us the perimeters in which we've got to work, and sends us back to the drawing boards to find some other means that avoids the "entanglement with religion' which the court ruled unconstitutional."

He noted various other plans are being considered or tried out in other states, such as direct grants to pupils or parents in Illinois and tax deductions in Minnesota and Maryland.

Although the provision of transportation to parochial school students by 24 states and textbooks by seven states have been upheld by the high court, Monday's decision jeopardizes plans, resembling those of Rhode Island and Pennsylvania, enacted or under consideration in at least 15 states.

A referendum killed the Michigan program and court action has challenged the Louisiana and Connecticut plans.

In Louisiana, where a state court blocked a $10 million plan to help pay parochial school teachers, Emile Conar, head of the predominantly Catholic Citizens for Educational Freedom, said changes apparently would have to be made "in our approach to state aid."

Atty. Gen. James Jeffords of Vermont said he was confident his state's scheme of dual enrollment in public and parochial school classes, a method used by half-a-dozen states to provide financial help, would be unaffected.

The Rev. Robert Schmidt, superintendent of schools for the Catholic Diocese of Davenport, Iowa, called the decision a "shortsighted interpretation of pluralism in American Education."

Dr. Hugh Wamble of Kansas City, chairman of Missourians Against Parochial Aid, said of the ruling "we don't want to be taxed to finance church-related education directly or indirectly."

Dr. J. Edgar Harvey, 2409 Golf, became Sedalia's newest chiropractor last week. Harvey had practiced in St. Louis County for 19 years. He is a 1951 graduate of Missouri Chiropractic College, South St. Louis. Harvey and his wife, Lois, have two children, Carol, 13, and Lynda, 9. He is a member of the Missouri State Chiropractors' Association. He is also a Mason and was a charter member of the Dellwood Lion's Club in St. Louis County.

Aborigine Adjusts to New York City Life

Doing His Own Thing

David Gumpilil takes aim at a kangaroo to provide food for two English youngsters lost in the Australian bush in the film, "Walkabout." The youth plays in reel life what he is in real life — an Australian aborigine. (AP)

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — David Gumpilil has learned to hold a cigarette in his hand instead of a spear. He has learned to sleep in a soft bed instead of on the ground. And he has learned to dodge city traffic instead of snakes.

But the Australian aborigine, transplanted temporarily to New York to publicize a movie in which he appears, has no doubt he could still survive indefinitely alone in his native bush by hunting and fishing.

"I still remember how to get along," said the 17-year-old youth who uses these real-life skills in "Walkabout," which was a British entry in the Cannes Film Festival. In it he plays an aborigine on a "walkabout," a tribal ritual in which a boy is initiated into manhood by journeying alone for months in the outback. In his role, he guides two lost English youngsters through the harsh Australian desert.

"I know from my father how to catch the food, fish and live there. The first time I went with my father and I was watching him show how to hunt," explained Gumpilil, his face tense with the effort of expressing himself in halting English.

When he was about 12 he went into the bush by himself, first for one day, later for increasingly longer periods. His only equipment was a spear, a woomera for projecting the spear and a fire stick to make a fire for cooking.

"I hunted for emu, kangaroo and water buffalo, for snake, and crocodiles. The King brown snake is very dangerous but good to eat," he added, looking little like a fierce hunter in his brown corduroy shirt.

Originally from a small tribe in northern Australia, Gumpilil came with his family to a settlement in the vast reserve of Arnhem Land, where he was recruited for the film by director Nicolas Roeg.

Skilled in ceremonial dancing, he has won numerous competitions and performed traditional dances of his people in the Australian Pavilion at the World's Fair in Japan.

The tall, thin youth also paints and plays the didgeridoo, an aborigine musical instrument made of hard wood. Demonstrating in his Manhattan hotel room, he blew on the some-six-foot-long brightly painted instrument.

"I think it's good in New York," he said of his visit. "We sleep on ground at home, but now we are learning. It is better to sleep in bed, I think."

But though he admits to enjoying the amenities of the city, Gumpilil plans to go back to the land and to hunting. "But I'd like to act in another movie," he added.

Meanwhile he has bought a fiberglass boat, which his parents are using until his return to Australia.

And how did he react to seeing himself on the screen?

"I look like myself, I guess," he said with a broad grin.

NAACP To Seek Probe

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The Rev. W.H. Hickman, president of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), said the group intends to see that a more thorough investigation is conducted in the June 9 shooting of Michael Dunlap.

Dunlap, 21, was shot and killed by policeman Dick Barnes after the two had struggled briefly in a Springfield drug store.

A Coroner's Jury ruled only that the young black was killed after a scuffle with the officer. It fixed no blame.

The Greene County prosecuting attorney later said he did not plan to file any charges in the case.

A committee of seven black civic leaders expressed disappointment and said the action was a slap at the black community.

The Rev. Mr. Hickman said the local NAACP intends to see that justice will prevail.

Believes Johnson Never Saw Papers

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — James R. Jones, former appointments secretary to Lyndon B. Johnson, said he believes the ex-President never saw the secret Pentagon papers recently published in newspapers.

Jones, now a Tulsa attorney, said he believed most of the papers should be released, but he questioned newspapers setting themselves up as "judge and jury" on what should be released.

He said he thought such release of classified information would "jeopardize the help of those governments in maintaining peace in the future."

South Asians Cooking In Increased Numbers

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The people of South Asia are cooking more with vegetable oil these days—and that's good news for U.S. exporters of soybean oil.

India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Afghanistan and Nepal currently are importing over $100 million worth of vegetable oils a year. Of this total, 80 per cent is U.S. soybean oil, an analysis by the Agriculture Department shows.

The reasons are twofold: First, the countries have been unable to produce enough oil themselves; and second, a shift in eating habits from traditional meals to such foods as biscuits and fried potatoes has increased the demand for cooking oils.

Imports of soybean oil from the U.S. have risen from 36,000 tons in 1968 to about 130,000 tons in 1970.

The department says production of vegetable oils in the South Asian countries has lagged because the "so-called green revolution has focused upon grain crops and given little attention to oilseeds."

But it says several countries now are making efforts to boost their production. West Pakistan, for example, is giving farmers free seed and fertilizer to grow sunflowers while India hopes to produce 3 million tons of soybeans by 1973.

Slightly easing the demand this year are good peanut crops in India and Pakistan. But the department says most peanuts are grown on non-irrigated lands and are highly dependent on good weather, thus making the probability of sustained good crops doubtful.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new free-flowering lilac for regions with severe winters has been released to nurserymen for commercial growing.

The Agriculture Department says the lilac, named Cheyenne, was grown from seed collected in northern China in 1930 by USDA plant explorers. The plant will grow to a height and spread of about eight feet. The highly fragrant flowers are a delicate shade of light blue-different from most other lilacs, the department said.

The new lilac will be commercially available within the next two years. Department horticulturists suggest Cheyenne be grown in northern states where some lilacs are damaged by the severe cold.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has released a new booklet which, among other things, tells why a bee sting stings and how to avoid one.

The booklet, designed as a guide for professional beekeepers, says a bee sting causes paralysis of the human nervous system, an increase in the permeability of small blood vessels and the destruction of red blood cells.

And the booklet says persons who make quick movements around bees or other stinging insects are most likely to be stung.

Continue Prisoner Visiting

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Embassy will continue its policy of visits twice a month to 12 Americans held in a Vietnamese prison despite their complaints that it isn't often enough, an embassy official said today.

The embassy will also do whatever else it can to make their imprisonment more comfortable, Vice Consul Laurence E. Pope said. But he added: "There just isn't a hell of a lot that we can do."

The 12 Americans held in Saigon's Chi Hoa prison have been convicted by South Vietnamese courts of criminal offenses or are waiting trial in Vietnamese courts.

In letters two weeks ago, they complained to U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and to the Oakland California Tribune that the embassy was not taking enough interest in them, and that their living conditions were inadequate.

The letter to Bunker, signed by several of the prisoners, asked that an embassy representative visit them on a once a week basis because it was their only way of sending and receiving mail.

The letter to the Tribune was signed by Richard A. Bueb of Lakewood, Colo., and four other prisoners.

Bueb is one of two Americans awaiting trial for selling LSD capsules in Saigon. The others are in prison for a variety of offenses, including two who recently were sentenced to five and seven years for possession of counterfeit piasters.

Saleslady Working Way Up

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Most working women are deskbound, but Jean Leonardi spends her days standing on a curb looking for people who want to buy cars.

She's a lady car salesman.

"The only one in town, and for all I know, the only one in the South," says the 25-year-old green-eyed blonde.

Joan was a private secretary until a month ago when she answered a newspaper ad from a Miami Ford agency that wanted to see if women could sell cars. Now she's in the top 10 among the firm's 30 salesmen.

Although basically a new-car salesman, Joan also sells used cars and trucks.

"I sold a truck last week," she said. "I still don't know what I sold the guy, but he loved it."

Winner of a hot pants contest at a local club, Jean usually wears pants or skirts to work. She says she sells mainly to couples.

"I make it a point to include the woman in the conversation and keep on a professional level. As long as the wives can see that I'm only interested in selling cars, there's no problem." Jean admits there are all types of car salesmen.

Dusty Days Expected For Great Plains

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — It was March 7, 1935, and the story was datelined Washington:

"Tons of Kansas, Colorado, Texas and Oklahoma soil hung over the capital Wednesday . . . An airplane observer reported that the dusty haze extended to an altitude of 8,000 feet."

At Beaumont, Tex., crewmen on a German steamship reported a dust storm that covered all of Texas enveloped their craft while still 50 miles at sea.

These were the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s, a dismal period of drought, dust and depression, one of this nation's darkest eras, familiarized by novelist John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath."

Some say the current drought has overtones of the Dust Bowl days. Others believe conservation, skies and other factors preclude anything of the magnitude of the dirty '30s.

It began in the summer of 1931 when a drought gripped the Great Plains, a vast area extending through parts of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas. Neither the first nor the last of the great droughts, this one persisted more than seven years on the southern Plains and for five years on the northern Plains.

Some fields lost from two to 12 inches of topsoil. Some sandy land became sand dunes. Thousands of farmers abandoned their farms and left the Plains in an exodus to California and elsewhere.

From 1934 until the summer of 1938, there were 263 dust storms in Texas and Oklahoma alone.

Fears of another Dust Bowl have risen across the Plains in subsequent years, particularly during the fierce dry spell of the 1950s.

Such is the case this year, with portions of several Plains states caught up once again in drought, soil-eroding winds and instances of severely blowing dust.

"Beef" magazine, which calls itself "the business paper of the cattle industry," raised the issue in an article entitled "1971: Start of a New Dust Bowl?" It observes that "students of weather cycles warn there's a possibility the drought in the Southwest signals the beginning of another 1930-style disaster for agriculture."

Few Texans agree that a new Dust Bowl is starting.

Clyde Graham of Temple, who heads the state's Soil Conservation Service, explains: "We are in a critical drought, especially in West Texas. We've had some dust blowing. But there are many acres of cultivated land now in grass as contrasted to plowed fields in the whole Great Plains area.

"I would think that we could be in a Dust Bowl situation if the farmers and ranchers had not applied a lot of good conservation work on the land."

He said it is virtually impossible to compare the current dry spell with the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s.

"I don't think you can because you haven't had the prolonged and extensive drought that you had in those days," he said.

"However, as soon as you say that, you can find places in West Texas where it's just as bad and just as hazardous as it ever was in the '30s.

"It just depends on whom you talk to and where in attempting to assess the severity of this drought.

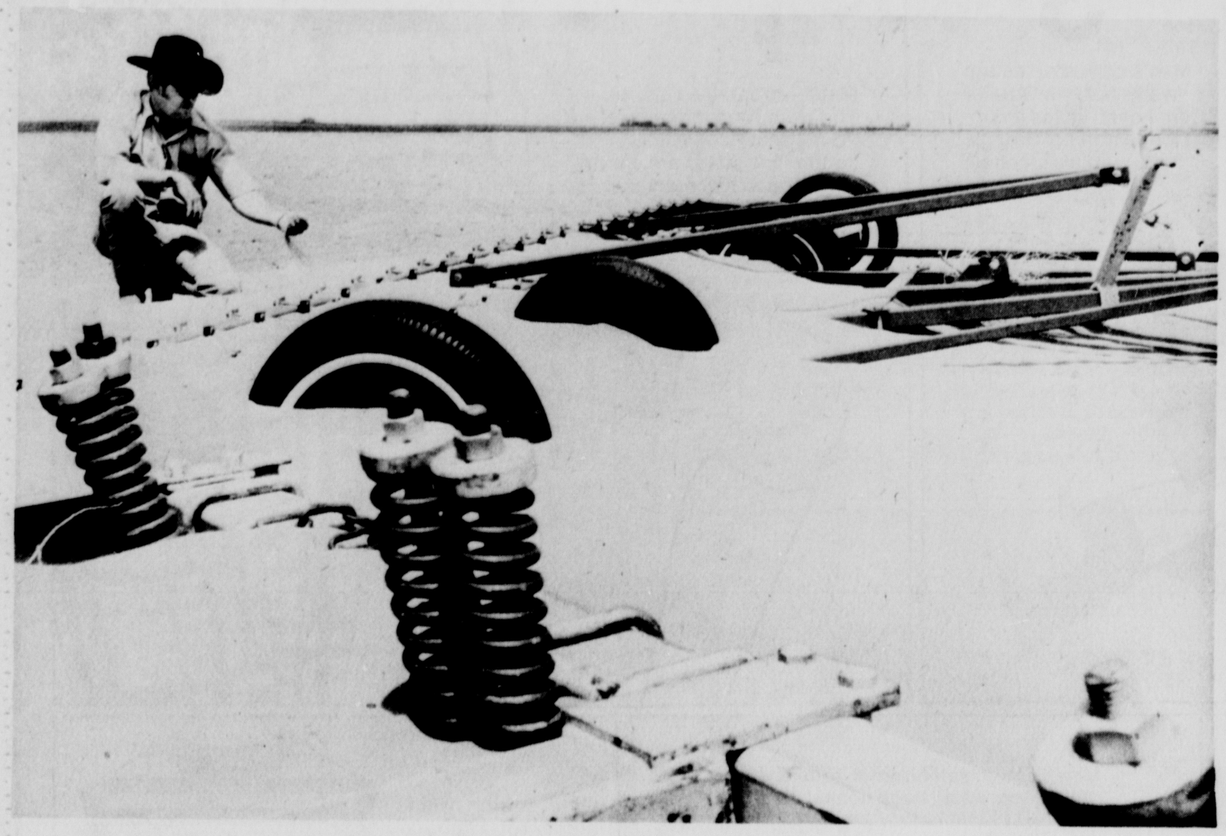
"But we need rain or this is going to get progressively worse."

Others point out that farmers now have the money and knowledge to fight a drought, that it is the ranchers, without feed crops and stock water for their herds, who face the most immediate crisis.

"That's true," said F. Jake Hess of McLean, president of the American Hereford Association. "Many farmers in this area have irrigation water, and if they don't, at least they don't have to go to the expense of maintaining an operation that is not productive.

"Cowmen have cows that must be fed and watered, and the drought has put them in a real serious, precarious situation."

But, he added, the situation is not comparable to the Dust Bowl days.



A Scene From the 1930's?

Farm equipment lies nearly buried on a field near Tipton in southwestern Oklahoma this year. Farmer Keith Pinson lets the dust run through his fingers as many residents of the area, recalling similar scenes of the 1930's, wonder what may be in store for them should the current dry spell continue. (AP)

ROBBING THE BLIND

PORT ARTHUR, Tex. (AP) — In recent months more than $5,000 in checks have been stolen from mail boxes in this area.

Postmaster W. T. McCuistion said most of the checks were from the U.S. Treasury Department, state welfare, retirement and insurance firms.

They included one welfare check for a blind woman and an insurance check used to support seven children.

Man Has Recovered Runaway Vehicle

UPPER SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP) — Earl Gerber, 58, of Upper Sandusky, has his car back after it ran off and left him.

The auto went into a ditch on a Wyandot County road and Gerber, who was alone, got out to push. He wedged a stick against the accelerator and the front seat to give him a power assist.

Once out of the ditch the car took off down the road. That was the last Gerber saw of it until a man who lived a mile away discovered the car in his back yard the next morning.

FEATHER OF ORE
